THE WORLD

YOUR CHILDREN.

Behaviour Outside the Home

By Olive Roberts Barton

I think it is a good idea for every mother to inform herself about how her children are behaving out of the house.

It is the commonest thing in the world for a child to have one code of behaviour for home, another for school and still another for the street.

To check on behaviour at school is easy. We know what to expect at home. But what are other people thinking about your children in the neighbourhood?

Reports on Behaviour.

Usually we don't hear about it, because neighbours don't want to be thought cranky or inquisitive.
The children, thus encouraged,
may be breaking every rule of conduct for all we know. Then, having had their fling, they come back to the fold satisfied. They are willing to be as good as gold and butter won't melt in their mouths.

Don't misunderstand, please. I am the last person on earth to imply that children are sneaks.
And also the very last to tell any mother that she cannot trust her boy or her girl.

So fundamental do I think this trust that for a long time I have hesitated to write this article, lest it shake some vital relationship between mother and child so delicate that the merest breeze may ruin it. It is absolutely necessary to any child's moral make-up to know that his mother trusts him.

Once he gets the idea that she doesn't, he will make his game match his name.

If they do things outside the home that they would not do in,
it is for two very plain reasons.
First, it is as natural as daylight for us to long for a real chance at self-expression, away from the boss. Another is, unfortunately, too rigid discipline, both at home and in school. The very child who seeks to escape is likely to go too far in his freedom.

Find Out the "Why."

The idea in discovering just what he is doing away from home is not to accuse him, but to try to find out "why" he is so different and to set about correcting it.

If he is resentful of too much bossing, can't call his soul his own, is forever nagged at and punished, he will nurse a perpetual anger. Watch him go out, then, and kick in a cellar window. Or if he has his play too rigidly supervised, watch him chalk up a

The Vogue of the Corselet

By Alicia Hart

The modern foundation garments are a far cry from the old-fashioned corsets which were veritable "straight jackets" of bone and steel.

Women simply are not interested in a 20-inch waistline. The main thing they desire is a smooth, well rounded figure which shows plenty of curves but no lumps.

There are girdles which are por-wall or pavement. If he isn't allowed to use his own room as his castle, watch him go over to Charlie's and tear up the premises.

Suppressed urges always blow up some way. In fact it is better if they do blow up.

The natural child at home will be natural outside. Better let him have his fling at our house than at the neighbour's.

fect for the figure of the medium-sized girl. They hold your hips firmly and give a long, graceful, slender line to the thighs.

But the mature figure or the one known as a perfect 36 needs something more than a little girdle. Corselets are your forte if you have such a figure. They are a girdle, brassiere and elastic waistline support all in one piece.

Made entirely of elastic, they eliminate uncomfortable strips of steel or bone.

Have your corselet fitted by either the buyer of the corset department or someone who is an authority on the subject. Unless the garment really fits your particular type of figure there isn't any use in wearing it.

If you have large hips the corse-let should be reinforced there.
And the same applies if your waistline has a tendency to bulge. The brassiere should be one of the new uplift varieties and it's best to have elastic shoulder straps.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Forgotten Sweetheart by MARY RAYMOND

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

BOB WESTON, son of a millionaire, comes to Hong Kong where his father is building a new textile plant. Bob tries to find a lovely girl to marry on the train and later learns that a Junior League benefit. The girl is JOAN WARRING, member of an aristocratic background. Joan's mother longs for her daughter to have the social position rightfully theirs.

Joan has left college before graduation to assist the family in a financial emergency. PAT, her 15-year-old sister, has a job as typist. Pat loves pleasure and pretty clothes and hopes to escape drudgery through a rich marriage. Pat meets JERRY FORRESTER, son of her employer.

Other members of the Warring family accept Jerry's attentions to Pat as an indication of serious interest. Joan, who believes Jerry is a spoiled playboy, is sceptical.

JOAN finally finds Joan. They go for a drive and Joan realizes she is falling in love with him.

CHAPTER VI

Bob did not kiss Joan. He only said in a voice, stirred by emotion, "You're sweet, Joan!"

Then he started the car rather abruptly and Joan relaxed against the seat, feeling shaken and happy. She was amazed at her mixed emotions. She had wanted him to kiss her and yet she was glad, terribly glad, that he hadn't. If he had, she would have thought of Pat and Jerry. She was sorry for Pat—sorry for all girls who knew men like Jerry when there were men like Bob in the world.

"A penny for your thoughts, Joan."

"Not worth a penny." Her voice was not quite steady, but the tone seemed to satisfy him.

Bob answered quietly, "I'd risk a lot more to find out."

Something hung between them, some golden, glamorous cloud, enveloping them even through light and casual conversation.

Back at Joan's home her mother met them in the hall. Joan introduced Bob and he grasped the hand Mrs. Warring extended.

"It must be lonely for you, being a stranger here," she said.

"I'm feeling more at home all the time," he answered with a smile at Joan.

"You must have dinner with us some night. Could you come tomorrow?"

"I'll be delighted, Mrs. Warring."

Joan caught her breath. Mother coming out of her timid shell, inviting a stranger to dinner! Was the world coming to an end?

The sun, pouring through the window panes, roused Joan next morning. She leaped out of bed and closed the windows, shutting out the fresh, cold February air.

She was suddenly nervous. Seven-thirty and a million things to do. Pat had finished breakfast and was on her way down town. Joan slipped hurriedly into her clothes.

There were the tall crystal glasses to be washed and the best table napkins and damask cloth to be pressed. Bill must go for Stella who worked by the day and was always pressed into service on special occasions.

"I'll get some flowers down town," Joan planned. "We really can't afford them but I do want the table to look pretty."

Mother was rather helpless in the kitchen when it came to special events. Joan counted off the tasks that must be attended to. "Roast to watch, cake to make, vegetables washed, mayonnaise—"

She enumerated them on slender fingers.

"Two hours coaching Paul and Marie Wilson. And if I have a minute I'll run over on Union for a shampoo. Perhaps I'll be really extravagant and have a manicure."

She tiptoed by Benny's door, suddenly contrite. Here she was, excited and happy when Benny was so ill. Was she really light and frivolous after all?

The morning did not go smoothly. To begin with, Stella sent word her husband was sick. She finally arrived and presently the fragrant aroma of one of the good cakes filled the air.

A little later Mrs. Warring came to the kitchen door with a distressed look on her face. She was holding out the snowy linen cloth that was her pride. A large hole—no, two large holes—showed plainly.

"Mother," she said tragically. "Well, darn it," said Joan, adding quickly, "No darling, I'm not using bad words. Can't you darn them?"

"It would take too long," said her mother. "And a mended cloth!"

"Never mind," said Joan, taking the cloth and spreading it out. "I'll wash and press a little linen centre-piece. This large hole is just about in the middle where the flowers will be and we can put a small celery tray over the other. We'll have two trays and we won't move the one over the hole. We'll manage."

"Well, all right," said her mother. Are you sure he's the kind that won't mind?"

"Of course!" said Joan. "He wouldn't notice anything like a table cloth."

The second mishap occurred a few minutes later. There was a crash, a terrible crash that sent Joan and her mother flying to the kitchen. Stella stood surveying a mass of shining glass.

"Stella!" gasped Joan.

"All the best glasses," mourned Stella. "Honest, Miss Joan, I don't know how I did it! I guess I was so worried and nervous about Jim."

"Never mind," said Mrs. Warring kindly. "Wash the old glasses in hot, soapy water and rinse them. Give them a good shine, too. Accidents will happen."

Joan fled to the living room. Why did Stella's husband have to be sick to-day of all days? Why did mothers have to attack the best table cloth when there were plenty of old ones?

Pat had come in for lunch. "You look worried," she said. "Everything's gone wrong," Joan told her. "Pat, before you go back down town could you run the car to the garage and have some gas put in? I have a million things to do this afternoon."

"Lots of trouble for a salesman—"

"He's not a salesman. It's something to do with a mill," Joan said vaguely.

"Well, I don't know why things must be so fine for this mill man," Pat began. She went to the garage, brought the old car out, racing the engine.

"I believe I'll go with you," Joan called. "Maybe the ride will make me feel better."

Pat chatted amiably, Joan scarcely listening. She was thinking this would be a good time to stop at Tony's and get lettuce and celery.

"I saw that swanky Barbara Courtney downtown with the best looking man," Pat was saying.

"Who's she?" Joan asked absently.

Pat chuckled. "I wish she could have heard that! Imagine not knowing who Barbara Courtney is! She's the best dressed girl around these parts. Goes everywhere and always has string of men along. Snooty. That's why I hate her. Girls like that burn me up!"

"To-day she was walking on air, coming out of the Book Shelf, and this good looking man was carrying some books. They got in his roadster and drove away."

Joan smiled. "I can't place her," she said, "but I seem to remember the name—Courtney."

"They haven't any money," Pat said, "but they think they're the last word. Some wealthy relatives educated Barbara in an exclusive school up north, took her abroad and then sent her back, hoping she'd marry a rich man. My, the airs that girl has! She can look right through anyone like us!"

But Joan had lost interest. "Drop me at Tony's," she was saying. "And pick me up on your way back."

She shopped capably. Tony delved deep into the lettuce heads, piled on the rack. He selected one, shook a grizzled head and chose another.

"This bettah!" he said. "Nice avocado from Florida," he tempted. Joan recklessly purchased two. Pat was back, honking the horn impatiently, and Joan, package-laden, hurried outside.

"You act like we're millionaires," Pat said. "Heavens, you must have fallen hard!"

Pat was first dressed that evening.

She wore a brown crepe, cut gracefully. It was an inexpensive frock but becoming. Joan thought she had never seen Pat looking sweeter and nodded approval.

"Will I do?" Pat asked, pirouetting.

"You look lovely. Now run along and see if everything's running smoothly in the kitchen. I'll be down in five minutes."

But Stella had no use for Pat in the kitchen. She went back upstairs to speak to Bill, grumbling as he struggled with his tie.

"What do we have company for to-night when I—"

Pat fled. She was halfway down the stairs when the doorbell rang. Pat hurried forward, opened the door and then stood staring blankly for a moment. The young man before her was the one she had seen a few hours before with Barbara Courtney.

FOREIGN SHIPPING SUBSIDIES.

IS CUNARD GRANT A FORERUNNER?

London, Feb. 9.

Does the subsidy granted to the Cunard-White Star Line for the completion of the super liner No. 534, mean that Great Britain has finally taken up the gauntlet flung down by foreign shipping interests and is ready to meet subsidy with subsidy? That is the most pertinent question being asked in London shipping circles to-day.

It was announced in the House of Commons to-day that a formal agreement had been reached between the Cunard and White Star Lines with the Treasury, merging the North Atlantic interests of the two companies.

The agreement was reached with a view to facilitating the construction of the giant new Cunarder, No. 534.

Legislation will shortly be submitted to Parliament giving effect to the agreement, which provides for the formation of a Merger Company called Cunard-White Star Ltd.

The Treasury undertakes to advance a sum not exceeding £3,000,000 to finance the completion of No. 534. The Treasury will also be empowered to advance an additional £5,000,000 for the construction of a second giant ship.

Profit Plus Prestige.

Profit as well as prestige, it is pointed out, depends on supremacy and speed.

Growing anticipatory reports of the new giant are published. She will be 1,015 feet long and will have a tonnage of 73,000. Her engines will be powerful enough to drive her across the Atlantic at 30 knots.

She will have accommodation for 4,000 passengers and a crew of 1,500.

In every respect, she will be like a floating city. Special features include a church, a cinema, streets, shops and every possible form of amusements.

Number 534 is expected to be launched in November, whereupon her sister will be immediately laid down.

Big Ships or Small?

In spite of all these glowing reports, criticism is by no means absent. While it is recognised that two such ships are indispensable in maintaining a weekly service, many declare that the day of these monsters, dependent mainly on luxury traffic, is past, and that the ship of the future is the so-called cabin-class ship.

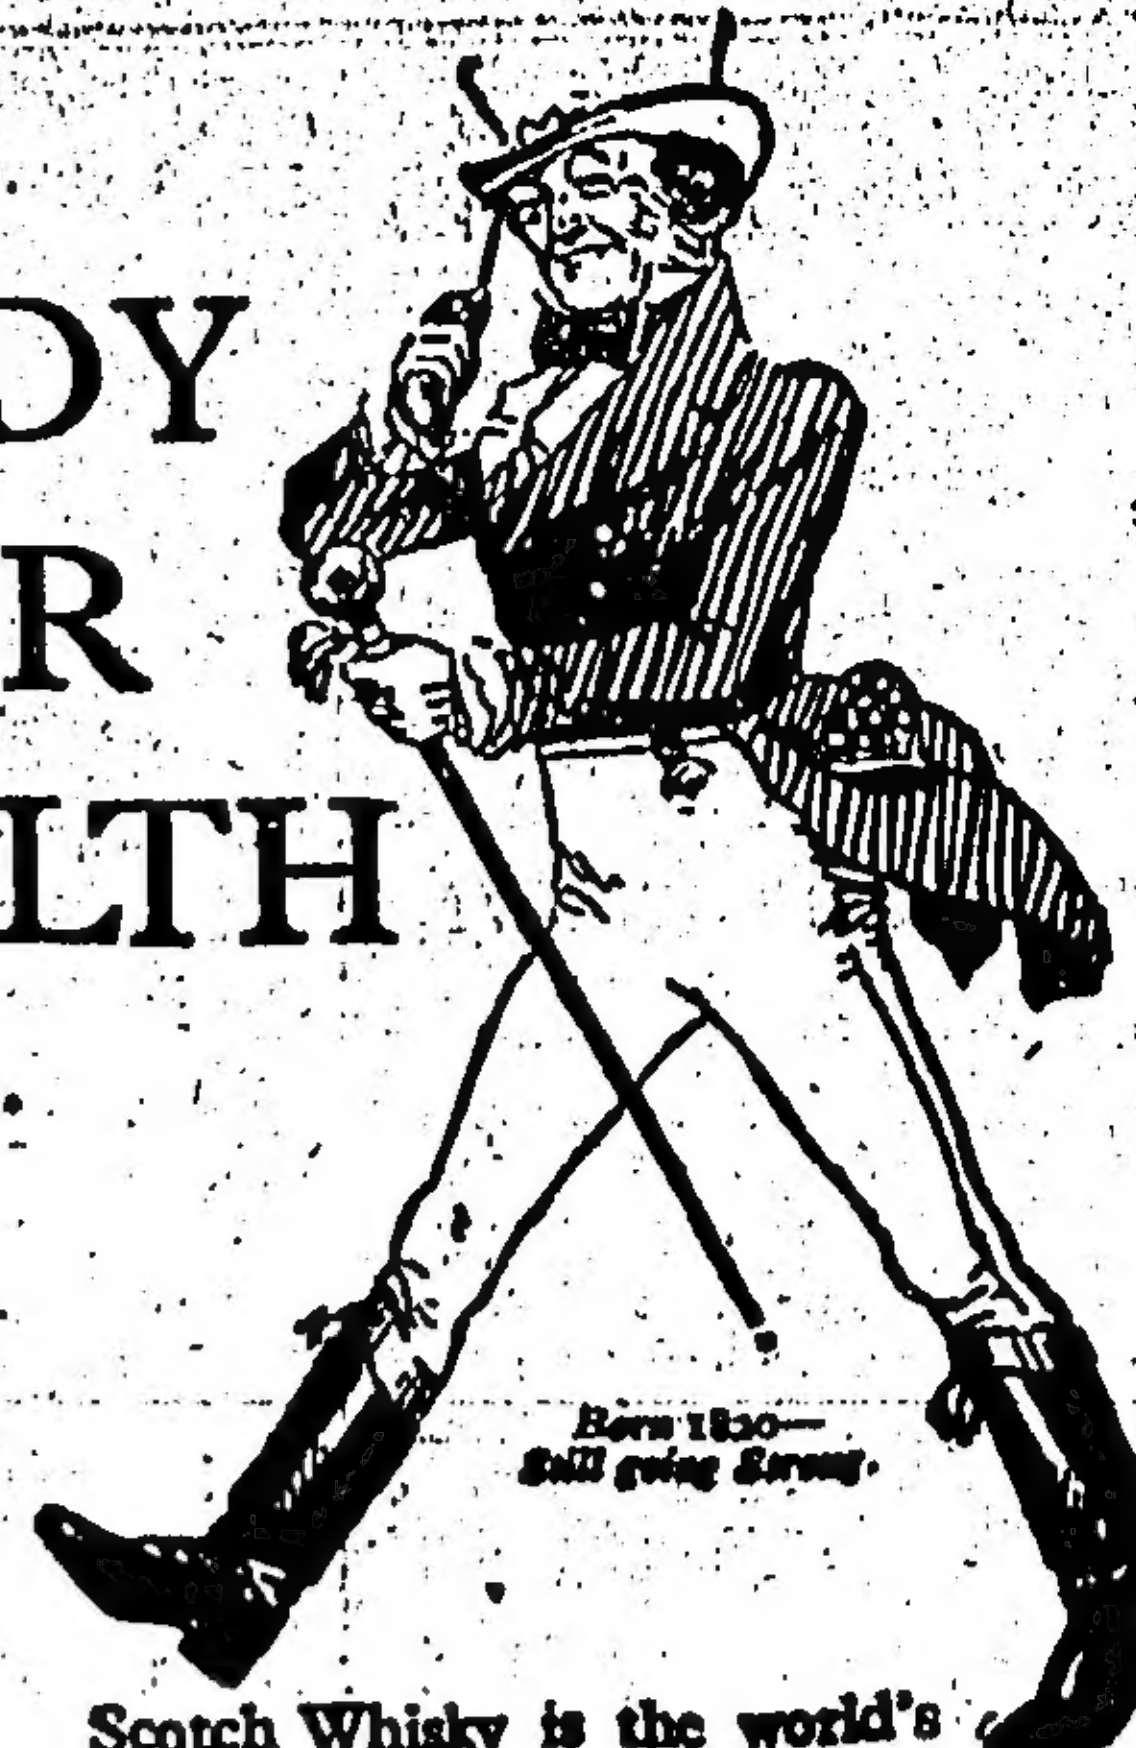

The subsidy, granted to the Cunard-White Star Company is not without precedent, for it is recalled that the Government advanced £2,600,000 for the Lusitania and Mauretania.

It is considered in some quarters that the Government has been unduly lavish in assisting the transatlantic passenger trade while tramp shipping, in a dire plight has unsuccessfully appealed for £3,000,000.

We Will Fight.

On the other hand, it is pointed out that the Government's action in subsidising the construction of the new liner inevitably constitutes a precedent for further assistance to shipping, fulfilling Mr. Runciman's declaration in the Modern Survivals.

 These ideas survive among civilized people to-day in the use of mascots, and the crests borne by ancient families. The special tribal characteristics were to be preserved and developed, as the race had become sacred, so that the whole daily life was influenced by the connexion of the clan or tribe with its "totem"; and recently a similar idea has reappeared among Western nations, especially in Italy and Germany, and to a lesser extent in other places. This influence is noble if lifted to a high plane, trained and cultivated, but it must not be left uncontrolled like a wild horse galloping furiously away.

Religion in its highest sense is "Theosophy", "Wisdom about the Divine", and the science of Comparative Religion gives us the touchstone by which we can distinguish between true religion, which is a moral and spiritual influence for good, and magic, in which the power of "Mama" is collected for base ends and used to the advantage of the lower self. This is unethical, and destructive of the higher life. True religion, whatever its creed, brings humility, a sense of one's own unworthiness, followed by a desire for a new life, an urge for purity and light, and a determination to make a fresh start. It includes a reverence and awe for the supernatural forces in the Universe, an adoration which fills men who are face to face with the good controlling powers of Life animating all created things and who have, as the Chinese phrase expresses it, a "Logos heart", a heart in tune with the Divine Christ-principle of the Universe.

At the public lecture held by the Manuk Lodge of the Theosophical Society on Thursday the chair was taken by Mr. John Russell, Presidential Agent for China of the Society, introducing the Rev. K. L. Reichelt, D.D., of the Tao Fong Shan Christian Institute, who spoke on the subject "Some Important Aspects in Connection with Comparative Religion."

The speaker began by pointing out how interesting and encouraging it is to see that the right man always appears in the right place at the right time, when the world is ripe for a new spiritual outpouring. That Hierarchy which plans for the Universe makes sure that there is a soul sent into the world fitted for the work which is to be done. So when the new science of Comparative Religion was introduced to the world there was one man specially prepared for the work of opening up the subject. Many individuals of course did their share, and we must not forget among them the work of Madame Blavatsky whose "Secret Doctrine" is a monumental storehouse of knowledge for all generations of students of Comparative Religion. The duty of opening up the new science however fell to Max Muller, a German who lived in England as a professor at Oxford University in the middle of the last century. His gift for languages, and special study of oriental tongues, together with his deep religious spirit, made him the instrument of introducing to the Western nations the previously little-known literature of Ancient India, especially the Upanishads, and through his influence Comparative Religion as a study was introduced in the Universities.

Before that time it was generally considered that only the great religious systems gave any real mystic insight, and that those of the "backward" peoples were of no value, but this was found to be a misconception; study has also revealed the basic inner principles lying behind all religions.

The speaker went on to deal with some of the primitive religious systems, especially those of the Malaysian and Polynesian peoples, telling his audience of the power "Mama," a fundamental aspect in all religions, being the mystical force which fills the Universe, vibrating in the air, running through all existing things, and centring in plants, animals and man. Some people can control and use this power, and it formed the foundation of the primitive priesthoods, men going apart and giving themselves up to its possession, and using it by means of spells, incantations and rhythmic dances, to do things impossible to the ordinary man. Objects impregnated with this power were their best instruments, and became "fetiches," and these things and people thus imbued were highly revered and feared, must not be named or touched, and became "tabu." Also a tribe or family became linked with a centre of this power, which became its "totem."

These ideas survive among civilized people to-day in the use of mascots, and the crests borne by ancient families. The special tribal characteristics were to be preserved and developed, as the race had become sacred, so that the whole daily life was influenced by the connexion of the clan or tribe with its "totem"; and recently a similar idea has reappeared among Western nations, especially in Italy and Germany, and to a lesser extent in other places. This influence is noble if lifted to a high plane, trained and cultivated, but it must not be left uncontrolled like a wild horse galloping furiously away.

The result of the Cambridge by-election, caused by the elevation to the peerage of Sir Douglas Newton was announced to-day and is another blow to the prestige of the National Government.

Although the seat has been retained by the party, the majority secured by Sir Douglas Newton at the 1931 general election has been considerably reduced.

The by-election resulted:

Doctors have long recognized

For ordinary head-colds, just

in each nostril and sniff well back.

Vicks is equally effective for deep chest-colds, coughs, sore throats or bronchitis. In these cases, it is best to rub it on the throat and chest at that releases the vapours. Most cold-

DETECTIVE FINED

TECHNICAL ASSAULT UPON CHINESE SHOP-KEEPER

A Chinese detective, Leung Wing, was fined $15 at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday afternoon by Mr. Wynne-Jones when found guilty of assaulting Tao Chi-woon in Canton Road on December 29 last. Mr. Wynne-Jones, before fining the detective, said the offence was purely technical.

Mr. C. Y. Kwan prosecuted, while Mr. R. C. H. Lim, instructed by Messrs. Russ and Co., appeared for the defence.

In outlining the case, Mr. Kwan said that on December 11, 1933, the defendant, a Chinese detective attached to the Central Police-station, visited complainant's shop in Canton Road and was introduced to complainant by a man called Tao. They had a friendly talk and then defendant asked if complainant, who owned the shop, was doing good business. He tried to make out that complainant was selling raw opium and demanded $50 from him. Complainant refused. Defendant called again on December 20 and again demanded the $50. He appeared on December 29, and called the complainant out of his shop on to the street. When complainant went out he was assaulted. His fink blew a police-whistle, and later they all went to the Station.

Magistrate Objects. Mr. Wynne-Jones objected to complainant giving evidence in the box as to incidents which occurred before the assault. Mr. Kwan had only taken out one charge of assault and if the prosecution were to prove that the previous incidents had happened, then the Magistrate would stop the case and allow the prosecution to include more charges, for instance, extortion of a bribe.

Mr. Kwan, however, preferred to keep to the charge of assault, and complainant then gave evidence that on December 29 defendant had called him out of his shop and asked for the $50 promised him. Witness refused and was then caught by the collar and thrown to the ground. Defendant hit him with his revolver and then took him to the Yau-mat Police station and told the Sergeant there that complainant was a pick-pocket who had tried to evade search. Complainant was cross-examined by Mr. Lim.

Wong Kwok-hung, a fink in complainant's shop, gave corroborative evidence of the assault. He had gone with his master to the police station.

To Luk, a neighbour, and a customer, also gave evidence of the assault.

At this point, Mr. Wynne-Jones said that the whole case depended upon the evidence to be given by the Sergeant who was on duty that night when defendant and complainant arrived at the station. If he could remember complainant making a charge about defendant then they could be sure of the assault.

Sergeant's Evidence.

Sergeant T. M. Reeves, attached to Yau-mat Police Station, remembered the defendant bringing complainant in to the station that night but the fink was not present. Defendant said he had arrested complainant because he refused to be searched in the street. In the course of enquiry, it transpired that complainant had merely requested to be taken to the station for a search. Defendant said complainant was a pick-pocket. Complainant did not make any charge to witness.

Evidence was also given by the Interpreter, who had not heard any complaints made.

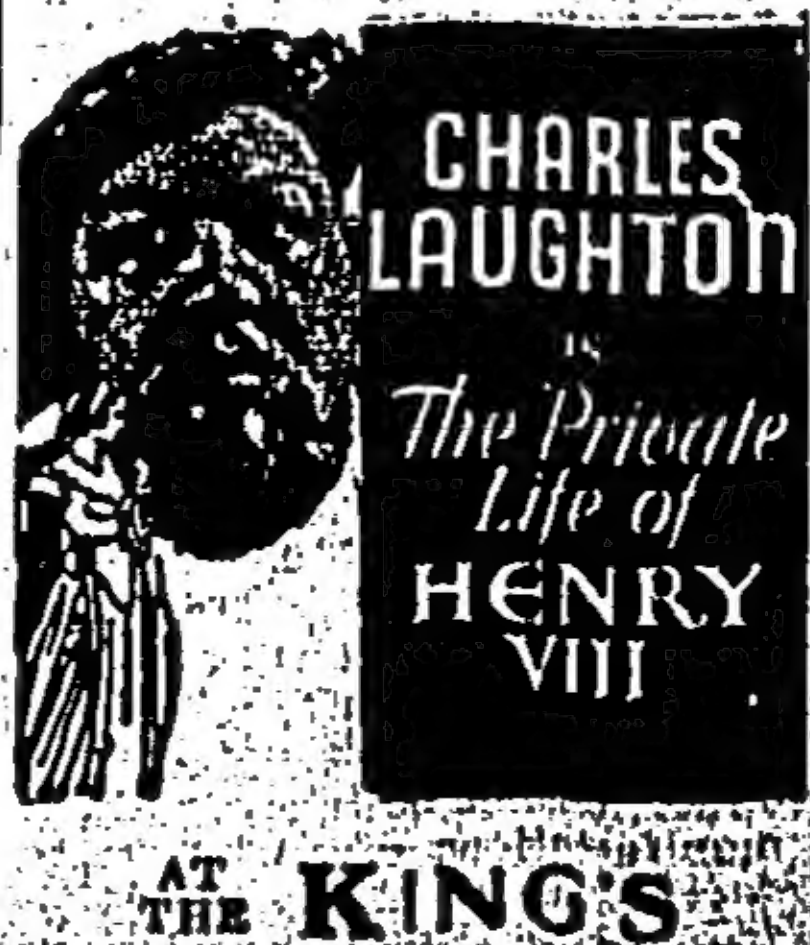

Mr. Wynne-Jones said that if such an assault had taken place, he would have expected complainant to tell the Sergeant about it. "These sort of people do not take these things lying down," Mr. Wynne-Jones said.

On the other hand, the Magistrate believed that an assault of some sort had taken place and defendant, being a police officer, had every right to search complainant and arrest him on suspicion but when he was in plain clothes, it was advisable for him to satisfy complainant.

"I think that possibly he was a little high-handed in the way he arrested complainant," Mr. Wynne-Jones said. "Complainant took a little time to think it all over and then magnified it into the story we have heard in Court."

Defendant, who has been in the Force since 1926 and in the C. I. D. for six months, was fined $15.

STILL HAGGLING

It is most regrettable that such a relatively minor matter as the question of food supplies for the British Embassy in Moscow should cause a further delay in the conclusion of the new Anglo-Soviet trade agreement. In April of last year, the British Government terminated the trade agreement with Russia and announced that a new and more favourable one would be negotiated. Ten months have passed, and the new agreement still has to be concluded. From time to time, various Government spokesmen have intimated that the negotiations are proceeding satisfactorily, and only quite recently M. Litvinoff expressed the belief that they would be quickly terminated. The trouble appears to be, however, that various issues covering a wide range of subjects, and really having nothing to do with actual trade relations between the two countries, have been raised. Even the Lena gold-fields dispute might be placed under this heading. What is to be deplored is that while British engineering, fishing and other industries are suffering from the loss of Russian orders, other countries, notably the United States, are stepping in and securing trade which otherwise might have gone to Britain. As long ago as 1923, Mr. Baldwin declared that "in Russia we have one of the largest potential markets in the world." That is as true to-day as it was in 1923. How substantial is the loss to British trade caused by delay in concluding an agreement can be seen from the fact that in 1932 British exports of machinery and industrial equipment, including iron and steel products, to Russia amounted to close on ten million sterling. Out of the total number of machine tools exported by British firms to all countries in that year, Russia took no less than eighty per cent. The United States, in deciding to recognise the Soviet, did not wait until every outstanding issue was settled. Certain matters were reserved for subsequent decision. This, surely, is preferable to allowing the months to slip by with nothing whatever done. If Britain does not stir herself to the realities of the situation, she may wake up to find that other nations have stepped in and taken the larger part of Russia's trade offerings, leaving British industries to pick up what little scraps may be left.

NOTES OF THE DAY

FASCISM IN BRITAIN

Although Sir John Gilmour endeavoured to joke the matter off when questioned in the House of Commons last week concerning the military activities of Sir Oswald Mosley's Black Shirts and particularly their possession of armoured cars, it is evident that the Government is beginning to take a serious view of the matter. Five of these cars have now been acquired by the Mosley Fascists and although it may be pleaded that they are merely used for the conveyance of speakers to meetings the point of importance is not how they are now being employed, but for what purpose they could be used.

BULLET-PROOF CARS

These vehicles are bullet-proof, armoured vans designed to carry twenty people at a speed of 60 miles per hour. They have steel bodies and are lined with bullet-proof steel. Even the glass is supposed to be bullet-proof and are fitted with steel mesh. They are said to resemble the armoured cars used by American gangsters. What are they for? The answer to this question is not precisely the private business of Sir Oswald Mosley and his "Black-shirt" organisation. It concerns every citizen, the Government and every constituted authority. There can be no possible justification for their possession and use by a political organisation, even one that avows the aims of Mosley's "Black-shirts" and that presumes to interfere in matters touching the administration of the law and the maintenance of public order, as the "Black-shirts" have done in the recent tithe disturbances, for instance, and some evictions cases.

DANGEROUS EXTRAVAGANCES

It is surely impossible for the Government and the police authorities to remain indifferent to the dangerous extravagances of the Fascists in England. It is amazing that they have permitted anybody to go the length of organising young men on a semi-militaristic foundation. Outside their headquarters in Chelsea, one may see uniformed Fascists any day, wearing overcoats that are a colourable imitation of those worn by the police. These young men are drilled, exercised, and disciplined, in the same way and with the same objects as the private armies which were allowed to grow in Italy, Germany, Austria and the Irish Free State. In all these countries these private armies produced the conditions of revolution and civil war. The Government and the authorities charged with responsibility for the maintenance of public peace and the processes of law in Britain must be utterly blind if they do not realise the dangers inherent in these developments.

GRAVE ASPECT

This is the gravest aspect of the present state of affairs in this country and the world at large. The organisation of citizens in political parties has been historically the practical expedient by which civil strife and tumult have been kept within bounds. It is better to count heads than break them. So the methods of political democracy were developed, and bodies of citizens banded together to carry on, by persuasion and argument, the education of other citizens in the political principles they believed to be good for the community. These methods are now derided. Reason and argument are giving way to force, to lawless self-assertion, to arrogant dictatorship which coerces and does not seek to persuade and convince in matters of political opinion.

POLITICAL PERIL

Political adventurers aiming at the forcible seizure of power find their material in masses of young men who are an easy prey in the present state of society. There are thousands, hundreds of thousands, of young men belonging to all classes, who in happier times would be in regular employment, pursuing careers in the professions, and settling down to the responsibilities of life as sensible citizens. They are idle through no fault of their own; unable to find any sort of occupation; bored, and at a loose end. They are indoctrinated with anti-democratic principles, and taught to believe that their salvation lies in sweeping away "the old gangs" in control of affairs, especially political and public affairs. And they are thus easily victimised. Those who perceive that civilised society is pretty near a crash, through a denial and defiance of the principles upon which a regime of order and social stability has been founded, cannot be indifferent to the manifestations of this new spirit of recklessness and political irresponsibility.

MR. PEPYS IN HONGKONG

3rd. Up bottles and to the good office and there ordering my business. Later to the Club for my luncheon after a glass or two of Hollands waters with Mr. Hen and others, and so to the valley where I do play at Cricket. And there I am assaulted in the most savage fashion by one who strikes the ball back at me so swiftly that I have no time to avoid the flight but must needs catch it, to my greatest possible surprise. Dined upon the Peake and very late home. But I do thank God there be others as late and so I do only pay fifty cents and not the two dollars I was heretofore charged of. And in future I am minded to take a motor coach up, as beyond the sign which doth profess, and then withdraw, a glass or whiskey, there is set up a most curious machine with red lights, such as one might see in the annexe to the nether regions, which do purport to tell one's weight. But this do be the last matter I should desire made public.

4th. Lord's Day. Lay late and after sewing at certain aprons that I would not put abroad, and by and by all is made good. By motor coach to the Peake and there did take my luncheon with Mr. Lord, and after playing at golf at Shek-O. And indeed it is a most Fayre Place, with flower beds set about the Club House and the course in mighty good order. But Lord! to think that I did know the place or ever a house was built or a ball driven, and indeed did act as broker and agent for the purchase of all the lands and policies. Yet I perceive, as I did prophecy these twelve years gone, that there be much malarie here, and the more when they do set up matchless to build new houses. When playing I do make one mighty strange shot as at the ninth I do quail my drive heavily and thereafter put one across the edge of the green, but the ball says not but rolls into the road and then down hill until it comes nigh to the turn of the road to the bathing beach. Home later and sitting in front of the fire until I do well-nigh fall on sleep. And so to bed.

5th. Very busy this day at the office and after at Bowies. At luncheon time come a box of mighty fine tomatoes from Lai Chi Kok and I am much pleased with them. Trust I do not make myself unwell with a surfeit and I must give some away.

6th. Busy all day and after a quiet dinner with General George to the King's House where the Philharmonic produce the Pirates of Penzance. And the chorus work I am well assured is as good as ever I saw in the Colony and more especially in the ensemble "Hail Poetry." The General very ing in great voice for the most difficult song in the whole of Gilbert and Sullivan. Frederick I do find lacking in the volume of his voice while the Sergeant did roar him as gently as any sucking dove and I am minded that the more robust methods of Mr. Bodella's foretime did the part more justice. The Pirate King pretty well, but Samuel's voice cometh not up to his inches. But upon the whole I was mighty pleased and the more so as I had heard that the orchestra was bad, but it is a naughty lie—for they are well enough and mighty restrained which so seldom is the case in productions of this type. Home and to bed in a pleasant frame of mind.

7th. This day I go down with Sir R. Harpenden to see a rehearsal of the Ten Minute Alibi, turning aside from Queen's Road at Arsenal Street and so to the water front and to the right. And I am pleased with the Naval Theatre it being so snug and comfortable a house as ever I saw and which doth please me even more so that the least word can be heard at the back of the house, hence myself conversant with the acting—the booking now being open and I am assured that the house can be well filled on all such occasions in the house. So to listening to the third act which shapes mighty well and I am persuaded that there will be a most pleasant piece upon the several occasions of this season. Drank a glass or two in the smoke pit with Lady Betty and so to dinner and after writing in my room.

8th. Busy at the office all day and after taking at the Peake with Mr. Carboys and others where I do and Mr. Pitt most opportunistic. But by this time I am used to it. After I have eaten my dinner I do proceed to go again to the Kings House and this night I am very busy set the piece more in order. A rehearsal much better and also the Sergeant. And I do think that Samuel's beard does improve him though I would his voice were twice the size for the crowbar song in the second act. Home and stayed up taking very late with two knaves who did prevent my going to my bed betimes. Yet it may be I am also to blame in the matter.

9th. Up very betimes and so to the office where I do arrive some ten minutes before nine of the clock to the sad perturbation of the staff and to the furthering of my business. But Lord! What a business it is to see these folk do not counterfeit one's trademarks! Very busy as ever on a Friday and so closing my diary early as this night I dance in one of the King's great shippes.

New Styles for the Office Worker

The mid-winter fashions give the business woman a chance to dress well on an economical budget.

THIS SHEER wool, rose-colored dress features the all important pleats at the bottom of the skirt. The waistline closely molds the figure and the ample sleeves become light at the wrists.

KICK pleats and side pleats, two-piece dresses and high necklines are the outstanding features of this season's office frocks for the business woman.

Countouriers as well as etiquette authorities have succeeded in making the average girl who works in an office pretty clothes-conscious.

And in the right direction. Miss 1934 wouldn't think of wearing trailing chiffons to the office. No more would she appear at her desk looking dowdy. The modern business woman is an excellent budget manager and she dresses appropriately and in good taste on her salary, no matter how small it is. She realizes that one or two frocks of good quality, exquisitely tailored, will see her through a winter.

However, along about this time of year, she shops around for one more dress to freshen up her wardrobe. It does just that until it's time for spring clothes.

Rough crepes and sheer woollens fashion the smartest office dresses right now. Colours are beautiful. Bright green, gold, brilliant blue, rose, red and all the dull shades are popular. Get something vivid for the in-between season and go in for pastels later.

Shirtwaist dresses have become popular and business women love them. Whether you're an executive or secretary to one, there are shirtwaist frocks for you. They are so trim and so comfortable!

The exit of bias-cut and entrance of straight lines to take their place naturally brought plenty of pleats. Have your pleats across the back, on the sides or on one side of the centre front.

Necklines continue to be high. To be chic, your throat must be covered. Sleeves in office clothes usually are quite full. You need fullness for comfort when you're typing or working over a flat-top desk. Raglan sleeves are grand and so are those with fullness between shoulders and elbows. Most office dresses have tight cuffs.

Two-piece models are in the fore. They give you a chance for variety since the skirt can be worn with several different blouses. A new idea is the Russian blouse type of bodice in the two-piece mode. They follow the Russian influence in that they have high necklines fastened on one shoulder with large buttons.

The business girl who doesn't want to invest in a mid-season frock will do well to look over the stunning accessories with which to dress up a winter frock. There are bibs which tie in back and make a low-necked dress appear to have a high neckline. Why not get a gay one while you're about it? They come in all colours.

Lame or sequin bibs are just as sweet as can be. Sometimes they come in sets with cuffs to match.

A bright piece of jewelry, worn high on the bosom, changes a dress somewhat. Fresh gloves, new collars and other accessories give interest to a wardrobe of which you have grown a little tired.

All of these are pleasant and inexpensive ways of making a winter dress last until spring without getting tired of its sameness. The girl who knows how to make the proper use of accessories is almost always able to save money on her clothing bill. She does not need the number or variety of dresses that her less clever sister must have, and the frocks she does buy need not be so expensive. A few dollars carefully spent on accessories can do a great deal to make a rather slim wardrobe appear much more elaborate and expensive than it is.

THE NEW DEAL? SPLENDID, IS THE VERDICT OF NEW YORK

THOUSANDS BACK TO WORK; PAYROLLS JUMP MILLIONS

BY PAUL HARRISON.

The Blue Eagle is strutting pretty proudly on the sidewalks of New York. He has heard Grover A. Whalen declare in ringing tones that "the work of the NRA here has been a smashing success."

Of course Mr. Whalen is the local NRA administrator, and may be prejudiced. But Mr. Whalen also has figures.

The figures show that more than 500,000 persons have been put back into business and industry, a number representing about half the city's unemployed only a few months ago.

Wholesale trade is approximately 18 per cent above the volume of last year, and retail trade has improved nearly 25 per cent.

Factories have hired 20 per cent more workers, and manufacturing payrolls have increased 13 per cent.

THOUSANDS BACK AT WORK.

In the retail field, more than 90 per cent of the businesses have signed the president's re-employment agreement, 33,100 new jobs have been created, and retail store payrolls have jumped $43,470,000 a year.

Thirty thousand New Yorkers are working in reforestation camps, and about 150,000 are on the payrolls of the Civil Works Administration.

New York likes the NRA very much indeed. Consequently, also, it also has demonstrated considerable loyalty for Gen. Hugh Johnson, who has not spoken quite so bluntly hereabout as he has in some other sections of the country.

Besides, New York is very remote from the centres of some of the more critical problems.

ALL'S QUIET IN N.Y.

What is just something that one buys in one form or another at the bakers' at about the same old price. Meat is a commodity which appears with dependable regularity in refrigerator cars.

Steel is something one bets on in the stock market. And so on.

Here's an example which probably is true of hundreds of New York concerns:

"In the states where our raw materials come from, and where our factories are located," said a manufacturer, "we fought the NRA tooth and nail. We've been scrapping in Washington, too. But all's quiet in our New York business office, where we had to put on a lot more employees."

While many NRA groups are being dissolved into regional authorities, officials here believe that this one must continue essentially as before.

"It's too big a job for regional supervision," says Thomas J. Donovan, vice chairman of the Department of Law and Complaints. "For instance, the New York state organisation at present has a staff of only 12 people, while the one for the city is keeping 200 busy. And at the peak of our activity we had more than 500 employees."

THROGS SEEK ADVICE.

From the first week in August, when the Blue Eagle went into action here, the bureau of interpretation functioned more as an educational and diplomatic service than as a legal office.

Employers demanded rulings on scores of specific applications of the PRA. And thousands of unemployed men and women, with even hazier notions of what it was all about, romped in with the idea that the NRA was created especially to restore their old jobs. Not just any jobs, but the places which they last held.

Nobody knows how this thought became so prevalent, but disillusionment brought grumbling.

The division of law has received and responded to 32,000 inquiries. The complaint division, which opened its doors on the first day to 150 clamouring clients, has received several thousand charges of evasion every month, and had eight clerks in its file room who did nothing but move the incoming and outgoing reports.

MANY COMPLAINTS SETTLED.

Of the complaints considered valid, 11,917 have been acted upon, being referred variously to the investigation department, the bureau of interpretation, the mediation board, and the retail code authority. The organization, as you may have guessed, is somewhat complicated.

The city's retail code authority is the largest local code body in the country, irrespective of industry, and has nearly 60,000 business units under its direction. These, in turn, handle about one-tenth of the total volume of retail business in the nation.

Here's Maurice Mermey, the executive secretary: "Since the retail code went into effect on October 30, we have 225 complaints, about 190 of which dealt with labour. Of the complaints followed through, 60 per cent were found to be justified and resulted in nearly 10,000 employees having their wages raised or their hours of work reduced.

DECISIONS ARE ENFORCED.

"There has not been a single case of outright refusal to comply with our rulings. Two employers took their appeals to Washington in a perfectly regular way, but our original decision were upheld.

"The volume of complaints has been getting heavier as consumers, employees, and retail competitors have gotten used to the idea that this outfit means business and is perfectly capable of enforcing its decisions."

As for unfair business practices, their retail codesters have been so thorough in their investigations of complaints that they have sent shoppers about the city pricing all kinds of goods.

Fake bankruptcy and going-out-of-business sales, misbrand-ing of goods, and other common dodges of unscrupulous merchants have been halted in every case in which a complaint has been lodged against them.

Mr. Whalen himself is proudest of his organization's accomplishments in the labour field.

SETTLED GARMENT STRIKES

"Our outstanding achievement," he says, "was the early settling of the garment strikes, in which 94,000 needle trades workers walked out. Mediation of those strikes was the supreme test, locally, of the proposition that labour could, and would, co-operate."

New York's garment industry never had been more than scattering unionized. Hideaway sweatshops, child labour, clashing union factions and the schemes of sub-contractors to dodge labour laws kept the situation pretty well out of hand.

When the Blue Eagle first swooped on the teeming midtown garment section, the International Lady Garment Workers' Union ranked twenty-sixth in membership among the city's labour organizations.

The strikes began early in August, and the NRA faced its most formidable problem right at the start of its own activity. Dress factory workers walked out, 60,000 strong. Embroidery and underwear workers, about 34,000, struck next.

Grover Whalen and his men presided at hearings night and day, for weeks. One by one the different branches of the industry resumed operation, and in every case labour was benefited.

WAGES ARE BOOSTED.

The work week, which had been virtually unlimited, was reduced to 48 and 52 hours. Pitifully low wages of many employees were increased as much as 100 per cent, in reaching the $16 minimum.

A minimum wage also was established for unskilled as well as skilled labour.

Sweatshops and home work practically were abolished. So was child labour, with the working age limit raised to 18 years. From a membership of 60,000, with a ranking of twenty-sixth, the garment union membership rose to 175,000 and third place in strength.

Up to Nov. 1, when the Regional Labour Board took over the work of the city committee, settlement had been made of 55 strikes involving 250,000 employees, a total weekly payroll of $6,000,000, and affecting the livelihood of some 700,000 persons.

Since Nov. 1, the Regional Labour Board has settled 148 strikes, averted 22, and thus has kept approximately 21,000 workers at their jobs.

RACKETEERS STILL ALIVE.

Labour's opposition to the NRA in New York has been negligible, with few such examples as the food workers and waiters' unions' threat to cause a New Year's Eve strike of 150,000 persons as a protest against the restaurant code when it was awaiting the signature of the president.

In spite of Mr. Whalen's statement that there have been only a few cases in which there was even a suspicion of racketeering, there is considerable newspaper evidence that some labour unions still are victimized by racketeers.

"CRAFT HAVE CHANGED BUT NOT THE CHAPPIES"

THE LIFEBOATS' WAR WITH THE SEA

By Sir Herbert Russell, K.B.E.

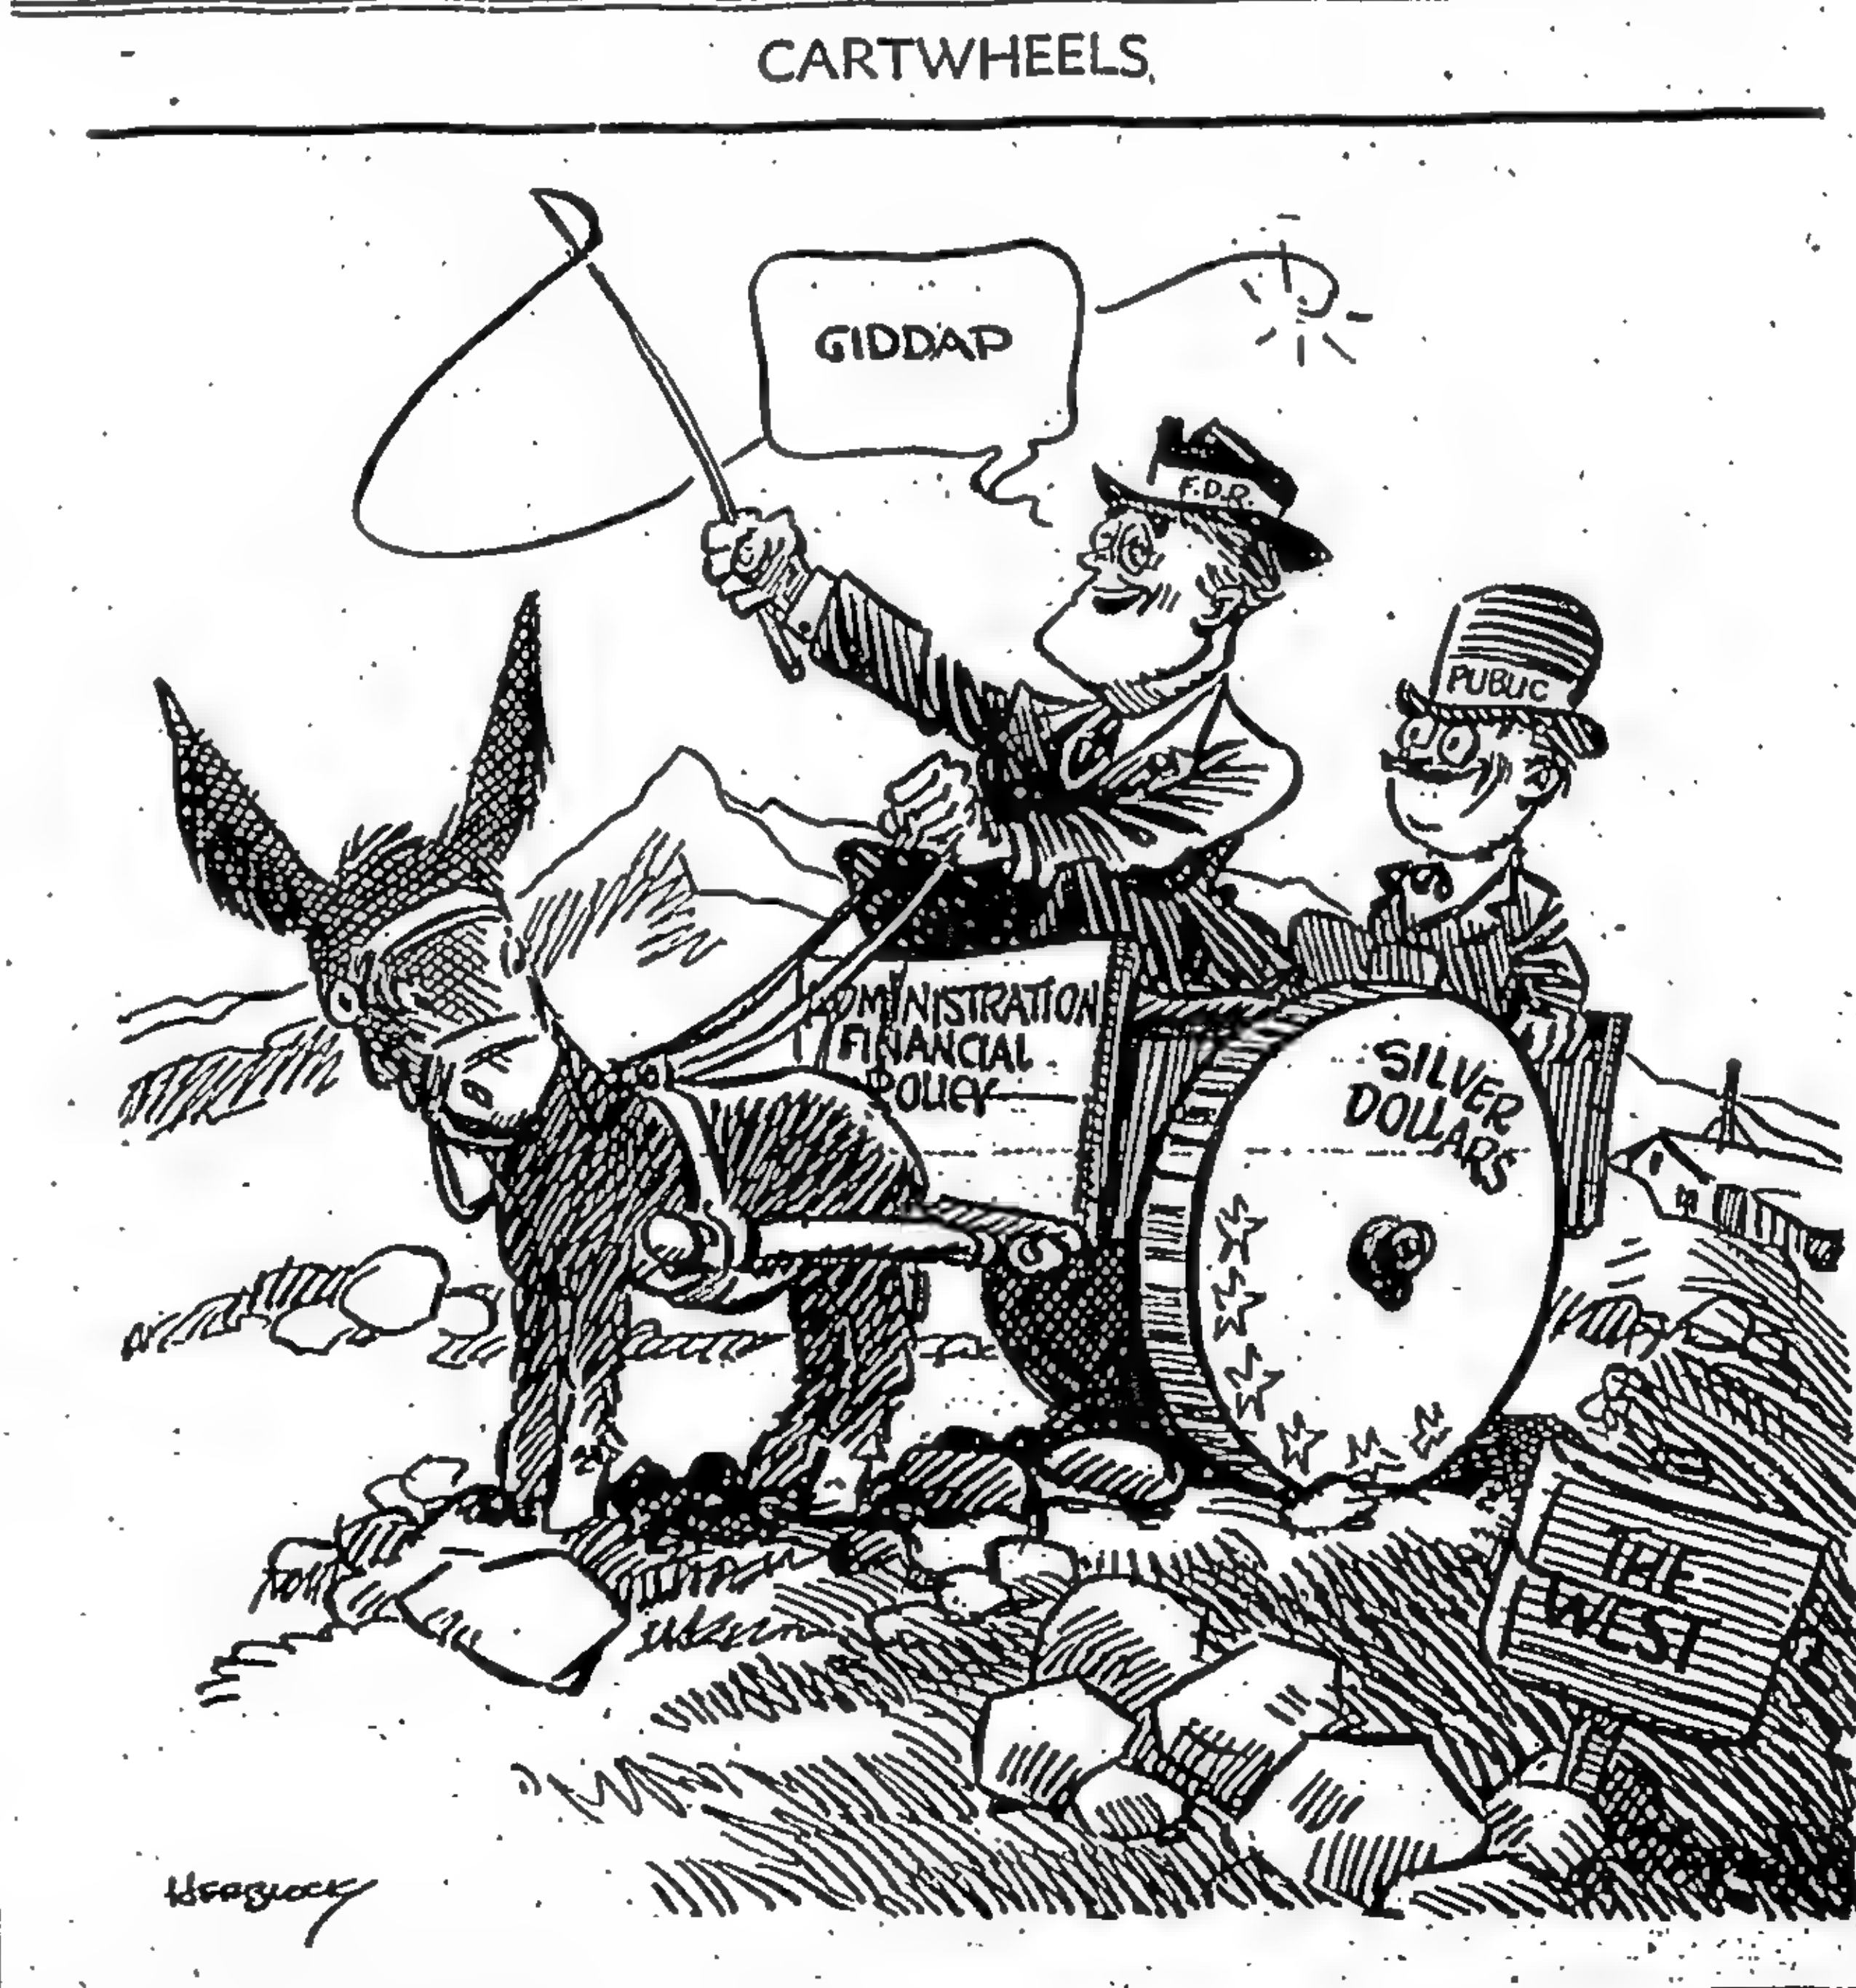

THE METEOROLOGICAL OFFICE were right—but then they usually are. The "gale warning" fast became a reality. The fitful growl of the south-wester steadily took a deeper note; the low-flying scud getting more hurried and more torn. A slashing, sobbing, rain-squall challenged me to shut the window. As I resumed my seat a block-framed picture on the wall opposite suddenly seemed to plead for notice. It is a photograph, presented by the Royal National Lifeboat Institution to "the author of my being," as Mr. Micawber put it, inscribed "in recognition of his valuable co-operation" in connexion with the wreck of the Indian Chief in January, 1881.

It is a picture of an old-time lifeboat struggling against a fether-white sea. The hooting rain squall gives a wild reality to the curling surges and the spray showering over the staggering little craft. Less than a mile away lies the wreck. She might be twenty miles away for the hopeless sense of distance imparted by the head-on fury that lies between her lifeboat. The boat is mastless; ten oilskin-clad figures, bulky in their cork-jackets, are straining at their oars; the bowman crouching behind the forward airbox is "conning" them and the coxswain, leaning forward from the yokeline, seems to sway in rhythm with their sweeping strokes.

This is what lifeboating meant half-a-century ago. In spite of the march of progress, it remains lifeboating still. More than likely that self-same scene was re-enacted during the week-end gale. The Rye lifeboat, which was rolled over and drowned her crew a few years ago, was very similar to the one in the picture, but the set of the tempest enabled her to lay her course under strips of reefed canvas. You may hear men—and seafaring men, too—say that lifeboating now is but child's-play compared to what it was in bygone times; that the motor does the work whilst the crew sit sheltered in the little cabin.

This is only partly true. That the motor has added immensely to the life-saving resources of this grandest of human services is quite obvious. But the man still counts above the machine. The power-driven lifeboat has her limitations. For many years there was stationed at Padstow the largest lifeboat in the world; she has now been replaced by a motor-boat. She was called the Helen Peel and was built to work up and down the iron-bound coasts of North Cornwall and Devon. Steam-driven, her boilers were always alight, day and night, throughout the winter months. But she was altogether too big to venture alongside a ship on the reeks, and when she was called away she usually towed the Padstow surf lifeboat with her. Really there was very little difference between such an experience and that of the men of the Ramsgate lifeboat Bradford, being towed by the tug Vulcan to the Long

Sand where the Indian Chief was going to pieces. Do not let me be misunderstood: The motor lifeboat is of priceless benefit to those in peril amongst the shallows. She can do what is impracticable to the sail-driven craft, which pays the penalty of her buoyancy by blowing away to leeward like a haystack. She can thrust her way against sea and wind, playing a searchlight on the wreck if she is working by night; she can spray oil from her drums to baffle the broken water whilst she spreads her net for the shipwrecked men to jump into it. But to pretend that these resources minimise the risks and hardships of lifeboat service is more than unfair to the men who do the job. Icy water and cutting wind remain untamable. A sailing lifeboat can bump upon a sandbank without worse consequences than jumping the crew off the thwart; a motor lifeboat would probably be disabled by such a blow, falling so much more heavily.

Lifeboating means war with the sea and, whatever the weapons used, the sea is a ruthless and dangerous enemy to tackle. I have a fairly familiar acquaintance with the lifeboat stations in the Scillies and at Sennan Cove. At each of these there is a magnificent motor lifeboat. The seas they have to face in a "deep Atlantic depression" form the best possible commentary upon any suggestion that mechanical progress has robbed lifeboat work of its peril. On the contrary, it has increased it by making it possible for men to face that peril where they could never have got off at all in a sailing lifeboat.

Assuredly the motor lifeboat has greatly widened the scope for life-saving. Not very long ago a resident of St. Mary's was stricken with acute appendicitis. The local medical verdict was that an immediate operation was essential but that, for reasons which are immaterial to the story, this could not be undertaken on the island. The coxswain of the lifeboat being appealed to promptly decided that this was a life-saving job. The sufferer was put on board and rushed across the twenty-five miles of water to Penzance.

Recently I was yarning with an eighty years old Deal boatman—persistently obstinate in his conviction that a Deal galley-punt was superior to any lifeboat that ever was. He fell to reminiscing upon life-saving on the Goodwins. The conclusion to which he came was that "things have changed a mortal lot, but the chaps, they are still just the same." Of course they have not changed. You can never mechanise the qualities of courage and endurance of the British longshoremen who form the volunteer crews of our lifeboats. They may, indeed, have thoughts of a nice little salvage job as they race along to the boat-house to collar a lifebelt, which secures them a place in the boat lying in distant readiness to launch, or to slip her mooring chain. But the uppermost desire, overriding every other consideration, is the hope of returning home with the Red Flag flying.

Long before the Red Flag became a synonym for anarchy it was the symbol of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution. Flown at the masthead of a lifeboat, it signified that she was returning to land with shipwrecked men on board. And the most hard-bitten amongst the crowd of watchers on the pier or the beach cannot repress a "hurrah!" on catching sight of that tiny square of bunting flaring in the wind.

The gale continues to deepen and the broken water in my picture seems to flicker more ghastly white. I open my paper and see that lifeboats have been out in half-a-dozen places. What matters it whether they are motor-boats or little sailing surf boats? The men who crank-up in the one would equally eagerly hoist the lug in the other. They may secretly doubt whether they will ever get out against such wind and sea—they never pause to express any doubt.

BRITAIN DECLARES TRADE WAR

GOVERNMENT ORDER ANNOUNCED

TAKING EFFECT ON TUESDAY

(Special to "Telegraph")

London, Feb. 10.
Britain has declared a trade war upon France. The French Government is given until Tuesday to change its mind about its refusal to restore full quotas to British goods.

The reprisals will consist of an additional twenty per cent. duty on a wide range of French products.—United Press.

As was announced by the President of the Board of Trade in the House of Commons on January 20, His Majesty's Government recently informed the French Government that unless the quotas for United Kingdom goods were fully restored they would be compelled to take retaliatory action by imposing additional duties on a range of French products.

ORDER ISSUED.

As the quotas have not been fully restored, an order has now been made under Section 12 of the Import Duties Act imposing a duty of twenty per cent. on a wide range of French goods.

The Order has been framed with a view to effecting a reduction in the imports into the United Kingdom from France as near as may be equivalent to the reduction in United Kingdom exports to France resulting from the differential quota restrictions which are still maintained.

Classes of goods covered by the order are set out and include articles of apparel of all kinds, complete or incomplete, and shaped material for making into apparel.

Books, shoes, etcetera; feathers; artificial flowers; foliage and fruit; and articles incorporating them; fur skins; goods manufactured wholly or partly of fur skin; and goods made wholly or partly of silk.—British Wireless.

VOYAGE RESUMED.

Hongkong Yacht Arrives At Panama.

Hongkong yachtsmen will be interested to know that the Hongkong yacht Talmoshan, manned by a crew of naval officers, has resumed her journey to England and has by now passed through the Panama Canal.

Mr. H. S. Rouse, of the Public Works Department, who, with Mr. E. Cook of the Kowloon Dock, was responsible for the design of the yacht, has received a letter from Panama, stating that the Talmoshan reached there on January 5.

The Talmoshan (54 feet over all) left Hongkong on May 31 last year. Her crew is Lieut. R. E. D. Ryder (H. M. S. Olympus), Lieut. C. P. Francis (H. M. S. Otua), Surg. Lieut. C. Ommanney-Davis (H. M. S. Bridgewater), Lieut. Comdr. M. Sherwood (H. M. S. Hermes), and Lieut. G. S. Salt (H. M. S. Oswald).

The voyagers expected to reach England by the end of March, but are longer than expected on the way. They reached Keelung (Formosa) on June 6, and Yokohama (Japan) on June 20. They were reported at Nemura (Hokkaido), in the northern part of Japan, on July 10. Crossing the northern Pacific, they made Dutch Harbour, Alaska, on August 21, and Victoria, British Columbia on September 12. They left San Pedro on November 2, and expected to reach Panama by Christmas.

FALKLANDS BASE

REPORT DENIED BY ADMIRALTY

London, Feb. 10.
The Admiralty has officially denied Mr. Frank Reynolds' assertion, appearing in the Illustrated Daily News last Sunday, regarding the fortification of the Falkland Islands as a naval base.—United Press.

Mr. Frank Reynolds, writing in the Illustrated Daily News, stated that the recent "secret" naval conference at Singapore decided that a big naval base would be established in the Falkland Islands. He pointed out that the strategic value of the establishment was that there was a possibility of the Panama Canal being closed to British shipping in the event of a war, and the Falklands could assure the safety of Britain's shipping, insofar as the base would hold the key to an expedient entrance into the Pacific.

VARIETIES OF GHEE

TWO IMPORTERS PROSECUTED

What was described as an important case from the standpoint of public health and from the point of view of the Indian community in Hongkong came up before Mr. Hamilton at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon, when two importers were summoned for contravention of the Sale of Food and Drugs Ordinance.

The defendants were Leung Loy-hau, of No. 73 Wyndham Street, and B. Ditta, of No. 66 Hennessy Road, who were charged with selling to the prejudice of the purchasers an article of food which was not of the nature, substance or quality demanded, the article being ghee.

Mr. T. S. Whyte-Smith, Assistant Crown Solicitor, prosecuted, while the first defendant was represented by Mr. R. H. Cole, of Messrs. G. K. Hall Brutton and Co.

Mr. Whyte-Smith said the case for the prosecution was that what was obtained from the defendants was not ghee, and therefore the definition of the word "ghee" was very important. At the outset he would like to submit that the case was a very important one in view of the large Indian community in Hongkong, and in view of the importance of ghee as an item of their diet.

"Now, your Worship," said Mr. Whyte-Smith, "my submission is that ghee is clarified butter. Later I am going to submit several definitions of the word ghee, and these will show that ghee is clarified butter and nothing else. Now, just as we can go and buy butter or we can go and buy margarine, so can an Indian buy ghee or he can go and buy a vegetable substance, or he might buy a substitute composed of animal fat."

His Worship:—You are offering an analogy?

Mr. Whyte-Smith:—It is almost a complete analogy, your Worship. Continuing, Mr. Whyte-Smith said:

"Ghee costs 80 cents a pound, and the vegetable substitute may be bought for about 20 cents a pound. My figures may be a bit low, but anyhow, the vegetable substitute is worth about a quarter of ghee.

"Now, I don't want to go into the subject of food properties and vitamins. I don't know much about them, and I don't think it is necessary for me to say much about it, but it is quite enough that from the public health point of view, a great deal of harm can be done if a great deal of people imagine that they are buying ghee when in fact they are only buying a vegetable substance. If they think it is ghee in spite of the low prices, then I submit they are being defrauded."

Mr. Whyte-Smith quoted from several well-known authorities which defined ghee as "clarified butter."

Stuff Analysed.

The facts of the case against Leung Loy-hau were that Sanitary Inspector W. C. R. Lamprill, accompanied by an interpreter, went to defendant's shop and asked for half a pound of ghee. The shop assistant took a substance from a tin marked "ghee" and charged Inspector Lamprill 35 cents. The Inspector then told him that he would have the ghee analysed and left the shop.

The stuff was taken to the Government Analyst, and it was found that the alleged ghee contained 66 per cent. of foreign fat.

The first witness called was Mr. Omar el Arculli, manager of Messrs. Arculli and Sons, military contractors, who stated that he supplied food for Indian troops in Hongkong.

Asked for the definition of the word ghee, Mr. Arculli said there could be only one definition and that was "clarified butter."

Witness stated that ghee was a very important item in Indian diet, remarking that an Indian would eat more ghee than a European would butter.

In the course of his business, witness supplied nothing else except pure ghee, but he had come across a substitute called vegetable ghee, a large amount of which had lately come from Japan. Pure ghee would cost about 80 cents a pound, and the vegetable substitute about 20 cents.

Mr. Arculli said that if he went into a shop to buy ghee he would expect to get a substance made from the milk of cow, buffalo, goat or sheep. He produced a book of the Golden Health Library by Sir Arbutnot Lane and referred to an article by an Indian Army Officer which he accepted as standard.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cole, Mr. Arculli said he did not deal in vegetable ghee or compound mixtures. In the course of his business, though, various samples were submitted to him. Eighty cents per pound was not a low price, but the price for white ghee was a little higher than yellow ghee because of its scarcity. Yellow ghee was not a mixture. The retail price for vegetable ghee was 15 cents. It had never been his experience to have difficulty in buying pure ghee.

"Ration Ghee."

His Worship: Are you aware that, outside your own business, there is a vast amount of adulterated ghee sold?

Mr. Arculli: I am aware of it. Mr. Cole: Is that sold under the name of ration ghee?

Mr. Arculli: No. Replying to a further question by the Magistrate, the witness said: If I went into a shop myself and was given a pound of ghee and was asked a good deal less than 80 cents I would be surprised. I would have a good look at the article, and if it was marked vegetable ghee I would at once refuse it.

Mr. Arculli added that some Europeans born in India used ghee. Good ghee could be determined by friction. There was an essence in the market put in vegetable ghee which gave it the taste of pure ghee, he added.

Sanitary Inspector W. C. R. Lamprill gave evidence. He said that on January 4, he went to 73, Wyndham Street, ground floor which was a compradore shop.

He instructed his interpreter to buy half-a-pound of ghee. The shop assistant produced a quantity from a tin marked in English with the word "ghee," and weighed it. He tendered one silver dollar and received 65 cents change. He split the ghee into three parts and put them in separate bottles. One he gave to the shop, one he kept and the third he sent to the Government Analyst. On January 21, he received the Analyst's report and on the instructions of the Medical Officer of Health, took out the summons.

Mr. Cole: When you sent the interpreter into the shop to buy the ghee, what did you expect to get?

Witness: Ghee. What do you understand by ghee?—I understand ghee to be clarified butter.

Did you know then?—Yes. The interpreter gave corroborative evidence.

Expert Witness, Sergeant Major Banta Singh, of the Hongkong Police Force, said that he received the rations. Each man was rationed one-and-a-half pounds of ghee per ten days. Ghee was clarified butter, but he had eaten vegetable ghee. The ghee which he received in rations was vegetable.

The Magistrate: How do you know?

Witness: I can tell by the smell. I always return it with a complaint.

Continuing, the witness said vegetable ghee could not be eaten except in curries.

The Magistrate: Why do you buy it?—Because it is cheaper than pure ghee for curries.

Mr. Whyte-Smith: What do you call it when you buy it?

Witness: Vegetable ghee. What do you call the pure clarified butter?—Ghee.

Mr. Cole: Ever heard of a mixture of the pure ghee and vegetable ghee?

Witness: I have heard that shopkeepers do mix it and sell it.

Mr. Cole: And sell it at a cheaper price.

Witness: The same price as pure ghee.

I put it to you they sell it at a cheaper price.—No.

How much do you pay for a pound of pure ghee?—You cannot get pure ghee in Hongkong. There is the M.D.S. and Sree ghee which are the best qualities, but they are not pure ghee. M.D.S. or Sree is sold at $1.10 or $1.20 per pound.

Replying further, the witness said that if ghee was sold at 70 cents per pound he would not expect to get a good quality.

Mr. Cole: I put it to you that mixtures of ghee and vegetable ghee are sold and the people know what they are getting and are not deceived.—The purchaser does not know.

Magistrate: Does he expect to get ghee or ghee mixed with vegetable ghee?

Witness: The best quality of clarified butter.

Replying to the Crown prosecutor, witness again said that one could not get pure ghee in the Colony.

Mr. Whyte-Smith: I am sorry, your Worship. I am afraid I will have to call more evidence.

Mr. Hamilton: The gist of his evidence is that if the Indians cannot get what they love they love what they can get.

ST. PAUL'S COLLEGE.

COMPLETES 55TH YEAR OF ITS HISTORY

St. Paul's Boys' College held its annual Speech Day last evening, a large gathering of visitors and parents being present who were afterwards entertained to a variety programme presented with much credit by the pupils. The Bishop of Victoria, (the Rt. Rev. Ronald Hall) was in the chair, others present including Hon. Sir Henry Pollock and Dean Swann.

In his annual report, the Principal (Mr. E. G. Stewart) said:

"The night we complete the eighty-fifth year in the history of the College. The past year has been eventful in one respect, in that we have at last carried out the alterations in the main block of the school buildings, and added another storey. The work was done as far as possible during the summer vacation, but a considerable amount remained to be completed during term, and school work was consequently for a time carried on under considerable difficulties."

The addition to the building has given us five additional classrooms, large and well-ventilated, and we can now dispense with some of the rooms in the Wu Ting Fong Hall which, owing to their proximity to the main block, are somewhat noisy."

Owing to the building operations and the necessary curtailment of space, there has been a slight decrease in numbers. This, however, is only temporary and will soon be made up, particularly now that we have extra classroom space. The attendance throughout the year was quite good, being 93% of the total number on the roll. Fifty-five boys attended without missing a day."

There have been some few changes in the Staff during the past year. In July the Rev. A. D. Stewart retired after twenty-four years in the College, during twenty-two years of which he was in charge. Both as headmaster and as member of the Education Board he did excellent work, on the value of which there is no need for me to expatiate, since it is well-known to you all. He carries with him the good wishes of all of us in his transference to a different sphere of work. Of the other members of the Staff, we have lost Miss Fullerton and Miss Singleton, both of whom have returned to England, and we welcome in their place the Rev. A. J. Bennett and Mrs. Bennett."

The School and Hostel premises were inspected twice during the year by Dr. Wong, the Medical Officer for Schools, who expressed his approval on both occasions. The health, both of boarders and day boys, has been good, as evidenced by the high percentage of attendance. Another satisfactory feature was that the eyesight test showed a great reduction in the number of short-sighted boys, as compared with previous years. We also had a visit of inspection from Mr. Sutherland in October. He had the pleasure of seeing the school building at its worst, during the renovation period. His report was very favourable, one of the classes being specially commended, and he gave us, as usual, some very useful criticisms and suggestions.

Time Table Upset.

Our senior class of last year did very creditably, taking into consideration the fact that the building operations rather upset the time-table at a crucial stage. Four members of the class passed the Hongkong University Matriculation; six passed into St. John's University; five entered Lingnan; one Yen Ching and one, Shanghai College. Twenty-three members of the class qualified for the Chinese certificate. The results in languages were good, particularly in Mandarin, in which only one of the class failed. In this connection I wish to express our thanks to Mr. Li Chi Wa, an Old Pauline, now Inspector of Schools in Malaya who has given a special prize to be awarded annually to the candidate who does best in vernacular subjects.

In the other classes the work was on the whole satisfactory, Class 8 having the highest percentage of passes.

The alteration in the date of the University examinations has occasioned a change in the school year, which in future will end in July. This has meant an extension of time for the case of the senior class who wish to sit for the Hongkong Matriculation or Leaving Certificate examinations, and a considerable shortening of the school year for the other classes, promotions having taken place in November. The alteration will mean the time of the examinations will meet, we think, with general approval, as will the abolition of the Senior Local Examination in favour of the new Schools Leaving Certificate examination, with its wider range of subjects.

Success in Sport.

As regards the athletic side of the work, football, volleyball, basketball and tennis have been played throughout the year. In the inter-school volleyball competition we carried off the Junior championship for the fourth consecutive time and the Small Boys championship for the sixth consecutive time. We also competed in the inter-school basketball competition and the combined schools athletic sports. In our own sports the long jump champion deserves mention in that he not only broke the school record but also tied with the existing national record—a remarkable feat for a schoolboy. During the Easter holidays the volleyball and basketball teams travelled up to Sydney and played several matches with the local team. There has been a revival of interest in football, and the success of the recent match between Hong Kong and Kowloon leads us to hope that, in the near future it may be possible to resuscitate the Schools Football League, which has been dormant for eleven years."

The Boy Scouts had a very successful year. Owing largely to the energy and enthusiasm of the Assistant-Commissioner, the Rev. N. V. Halward, new life has been infused into the Troop. The Scouts have done their good deeds each Saturday afternoon, working on the improvement of the camp site at Sai Wan. Our camp during the Christmas holidays was well attended, and the Troop finished their season by winning the competition for the Prince of Wales banner.

Time prevents reference in detail to the successes of Old Paulines. Of those who have graduated from various Universities during the past year I would like to mention in particular Lee Shiu Ying, Fong Tak Ming, Cheung Shiu Tong and Sung Hing Chee, not only on account of their success, but because of the good work they have done in connection with the Old Boys Association. We have to deplore a loss in the death of Mr. C. C. Wu, who, like his father, one of the earliest students of the school, was always a staunch friend and supporter of the College. The Old Boys Association, recently reorganised, is a link between the College and the wider world outside. We are always glad to hear of Old Paulines scattered as they now are throughout the world, and the Association is the best means of keeping in touch with them. There are already branches of the Association in Shanghai and Canton, in St. John's and Lingnan; and we hope that others will be formed ere long.

Free Night School.

Our other activities need be mentioned only shortly. The free night school, a really useful institution, has now been in existence for more than twenty years. It is financed and staffed entirely by the boys of this College, and its object is to afford elementary education in both Chinese and English to those whose circumstances do not permit of their attending any of the day-schools. The teaching staff consists of thirty-six, each of whom gives one evening in the week, and there has never been a shortage of volunteers. A number of scholars from the College are assisting regularly at the School for street sleepers. In addition, we still maintain a school at Aberdeen, supported financially by the boys, though the need for this school is not now so evident.

Finally, I wish to express my thanks to the members of the College Council and to the Staff of the College for their support during (Continued on Page 11.)

ENTERTAINING TENNIS BY RAZACK & CASSUMBHOY

RICKETTS AND BEACH-THOMAS OUTPLAYED

OXFORD "BLUE" A LITTLE DISAPPOINTING

HO KA LAU AND TSUI WAI PUI SHOW WHAT THEY CAN DO

(By "Veritas").

J. A. Cassumbhoy and I. M. A. Razack, who as a result of their partnership in 1928, 1929 and 1933, have become season warriors in the open doubles championship of the Colony, yesterday played their best tennis for a long time when they defeated C. R. M. Ricketts, Oxford football and lacrosse Blue, and Beach-Thomas, son of the famous English journalist, Sir W. Beach-Thomas, in straight sets in the first round of the current tournament.

At one stage the losers appeared capable of extending the I.R.C. pair to the limit, for they held them to 16 games in the first set, and went ahead two-love in the second.

But once the winners had broken through Beach-Thomas's service in the fourth game, there was no stopping them, and playing with the utmost confidence and skill at the net, they went to their points with very little opposition.

Ricketts was not seen anywhere near his best. The instability of Beach-Thomas shook his confidence, and although he was prominent in many of the rallies, and was especially effective overhead and in torch-and-driving, his general game suffered.

UNORTHODOX STROKES.

Ricketts found Cassumbhoy's service, directed to his backhand, a little overpowering, and he was undeniably shaky in this department. His volley lob too, went all astray. I think it is safe to say that Ricketts is a far better singles player.

Beach-Thomas, the possessor of some rather unorthodox strokes, was happier at the net than anywhere else. His service was weak enough to offer Cassumbhoy and Razack plenty of opportunities of going into the attack, and they continually broke through the opposition because of Beach-Thomas's unreliable ground strokes. Beach-Thomas accomplished his best work at the net, where he very neatly tucked the ball away either sharply across the court or down the "tramlines".

As a combination, however, the losers suffered in comparison to Cassumbhoy and Razack.

CASSUMBHOY'S ACES.
Cassumbhoy's all court play was all right. He was very severe in service and scored an unusual number of aces for local tennis as a result. There was no real defect in Cassumbhoy's game, which gave a true indication of his proper form.

Razack made overhead his forte, and I have never seen him to better advantage. He killed from practically all parts of the court and lent valuable support. Possibly the most impressive feature of this pair was the small number of mistakes they committed. In past years it is in this direction that they have failed.

It wasn't to be expected that S.E. and D.S. Green would offer any serious opposition to Ho Ka-lau and Tsui Wai-pui, but the match gave a large number of spectators an opportunity of seeing the Chinese couple in action after their recent successful campaign in Indo-China. It is doubtful if they were dissatisfied. Both played clever tennis and with a much better understanding. The real test of their capabilities will come later, but other leading pairs had better beware. There is a "champion" about this combination.

F. H. Kwok scored his second success of the week when in company with S. W. Liang he won against Remedios and L. A. da Silva much more easily than one would have expected. By the same token Remedios and Remedios journeyed comfortably into the second round at the expense of Gamble and Haigh.

NEXT WEEK'S MATCHES.

With M. W. Lo and Goldman sick, and M. K. Lo also under doctor's orders, the doubles tie between the brothers and Fincher and Goldman was postponed. It is quite likely that last year's finalists will be given a walk-over into the second round, and there is but a faint possibility of M. W. Lo playing off his match with Ricketts.

YESTERDAY'S RESULT.

SINGLES.

Lt. H. D. Tollington beat Lt. Cdr. C. M. Jacob 6-1, 9-7.

DOUBLES.

C. A. Barretto and A. V. Remedios beat C. Gamble and J. Haigh 6-2, 6-3.

F. G. Kwok and S. W. Liang beat J. J. Remedios and L. A. da Silva 6-1, 6-0.

Ho Ka-lau and Tsui Wai-pui beat S. E. and D. S. Green 6-2, 6-2.

J. A. Cassumbhoy and I. M. A. Razack beat C. R. M. Ricketts and M. Beach-Thomas 9-7, 6-3.

It is set for Monday next, but I imagine we shall find Ricketts in the second round by default.

Next week's programme is confined to matches on Monday, Tuesday and Friday, with two interesting matches on the first two days.

Ho Ka-lau and Hachuma meet on Monday on the main court, and the Rumjahn cousins on Tuesday. The rest of the programme is taken up with further first round doubles encounters and several second round singles.

Miss Joyce Cooper Upholds Her Reputation.

SYDNEY SCHOOLGIRL WHO MAY SOON BECOME A SWIMMING STAR

Joyce Cooper certainly upheld her reputation when, ten days after landing from a six weeks' sea trip, she turned out to win the New South Wales 100 Yds. Championship in 63.5-sec. from Patricia Norton 64.2-sec., and Molly Mitchell, 65-sec.

The race was decided in the famous Domain Baths, Sydney, over a 50 yds. course, and Miss Cooper's time was only 1.2-sec. slower than her home record for the distance, made under much more favourable conditions in a covered bath.

On her Olympic form in 1932 Miss Cooper has a slight advantage over the Australian champion, but there is, however, a distinct possibility of a surprise from Miss Norton, who finished only 3-sec. behind the English challenger in the N.S.W. Championship last week-end.

Miss Norton, quite unknown at the moment on this side of the world, will probably be one of the most discussed figures in international swimming in the near future. As a 14-years-old Sydney schoolgirl, she astonished Australian circles last November, in her first appearance of the season, when she returned 69secs. for 100 yds. over a 50-metre course. An inexperienced girl of fourteen who improves 3sec. in eight weeks, and then proceeds to break 65sec. for 100 yds. in the Domain Baths in her first important race, is indeed a novice of exceptional promise.

Though Miss Cooper was beaten by the Australian backstroke title-holder, Bonnie Mealing, in the N.S.W. 100 Yds. Backstroke Championship in 73sec., there was only a bare touch between the pair. This was one of Miss Cooper's best backstroke efforts, for when she and Miss Mealing last met in the final of the Olympic backstroke there was a margin of 2.1-sec. in favour of the Australian.

Presumably, Miss Cooper's struggle in the backstroke race affected her swimming in the N.S.W. 440 yds. free-style, as Miss Edna Davey won comfortably in 5 min. 53.2-sec., a time which Miss Cooper has beaten on several occasions.

Australian prospects appear generally to be bright, as in addition to Miss Norton there is a 16-year-old girl, Dorothy Withers, capable of 67.4-5 sec. for 100 yds., and a Melbourne youth, Geoffrey Bockley, the all-round champion of Victoria, who recently made an Australian 100 yds. record of 53-sec., while latest reports credit Noel Ryan with 5 min. for 440 yds. in private trials. Although the Empire Games in London are six months away, it is already evident that the standard of performance in London will be much higher than at the last Games held in Canada in 1930.

FIVE MINUTES FOOTBALL.

THE STEP SYSTEM OF DEFENCE

(By "Saracen").

This story is told of a half back trying to arrive at a working plan with a back on the eve of an international match. Said the half back, "I'll mark the opposing inside forward and you look after the winger." "What do you mean?" asked the back. "I always take the player nearest to me."

It is difficult to believe, but I know it to be true and I am afraid to some players it will not appear very strange. Even in these enlightened days there are professional players who "take the man nearest to them" and hence they play without method. Moreover they are a cause of much trouble in a team.

There can be no success in football unless there is method and it ought to be studied and prepared. This applies both to attack and defence and it is especially important in the protection of the goal.

The Arsenal have brought their defence to a fine art. It is the best I have seen in twenty-five years. I doubt in fact whether there has ever been anything like it in soundness and it has been designed according to a carefully thought-out plan. They have found the way for every player to cover another and this has been the secret of their success. Thus if one man fails to bring off a tackle or intercept the ball a second is immediately at hand to make a further attempt.

PENDULUM MOVES.

The Arsenal defence, as should all defences, moves in the pendulum fashion. Suppose, for instance, they have to meet an attack down the right wing. It is their left wing which is called into action but as half back and back go out to meet it there is at the same time a swing towards the middle of the right defensive flank. The object of this arrangement is, of course, to protect the middle in the event of the attack breaking through and trying to converge on goal.

Another description given to this system is the "step defence" and I think it explains itself. One man falls into the wake of another, thus acting as the essential cover.

One advantage of this organised defence is that it gives every player a special duty. He knows the opponent he has to look after; you do not see two men rushing in to make the same tackle and thus leaving another opponent to run loose.

Indeed, if perfection could ever be attained one could conceive defence organised on these lines producing a state of stalemate. It will never come to that but sometimes when one has watched the Arsenal it has seemed as if it were impossible for the other side to score.

FIRST WEEK'S TENNIS SUMMED UP

ONLY ONE SURPRISE IN 28 MATCHES

THE "BLACK BALL PROBLEM": IS IT TO BE IGNORED?

(By "Veritas").

If the same rate of progress which has featured the opening of the tennis championships this week is maintained, 1934 will see a new record established for the quick completion of the tournament.

Already 23 of the 28 first round matches have been played, as well as two second round engagements, whilst five first round doubles have been decided.

The weather has been the principal means of this excellent progress. Tradition received a slap in the face when on the first five days no rain fell to hinder the programmes, and as there is no indication of a break in the present dry spell, next week should see a big advancement made.

The opening matches were, as usual, fairly free of surprises. The only encounter which can really come under this heading was the victory of F. H. Kwok over A. L. Sullivan. The elimination of P. K. Liang by Firdos Khan was also somewhat unexpected.

PROBABLE LAST 8.

The "seeded" and other leading players survived, and already one can, with fair safety, predict the composition of the last eight. Taul Wai-pui and Cassumbhoy should fill the top bracket, Ricketts and Duff the next, Cannon or Ng Kam-chuen and Ho Ka-lau the next, and S. A. or H. D. Rumjahn and E. C. Fincher the next.

Unless there are any upsets, a classic match between Taul Wai-pui and W. A. H. Duff in the top semi-final is assured, whilst Ho Ka-lau, who is bound to reach the last four, will probably meet S. A. Rumjahn for the other bracket.

One pleasing characteristic of the first week's play has been the increased consideration by the spectators for the competitors. As yet there has been no necessity for complaining of encroachment on the touchlines, and the distressing habit displayed last year by a large number of thoughtless people of running from one match to another directly across an occupied court, has not yet been repeated.

BLACK BALL PROBLEM.

The "black ball problem", as I will call it, has apparently not been tackled, and unless competitors are willing to dig their hands into their own pockets to purchase new balls, three set matches have to be played with the one issue of balls, which are, by the end of the second set, coal black.

For a competitor to be expected to pay for tennis balls after contributing a not unsubstantial entrance fee seems a little out of place in a tournament of the magnitude of the Hongkong Championships. Below will be found the complete list of matches for next week.

Should There Be One Or Two Services?

TENNIS STARS AT VARIANCE

The question whether the server should be allowed one or two deliveries is being discussed in France. J. Borotra is not in favour of any change in the present rules of the game. There is no doubt, he says that the custom of two balls for service gives a considerable advantage to the server, especially for the player who has the happy knack of a cannon-ball service at his command.

"But I do not believe that this factor is sufficient to have one of the two services suppressed and so modify a rule which has stood the test of 50 years' practice. The cannon-ball service represents the most violent effort in tennis and certainly ends by tiring out the server. On the other hand—and here I evidently speak as a player directly interested—the suppression of one of the two balls allowed for service would make it practically impossible to take the net on service and would certainly have the effect of slowing down play, already slowed down too much since the International Federation adopted a less lively ball some years ago."

LACOSTE FAVOURS CHANGE.

R. Lacoste favours a change. In his opinion one service would level up somewhat the advantage at present held by the server.

"I also believe," he says, "after a short period of trial the number of service faults would hardly exceed the double-faults made to-day. I believe that the speed of the one service would establish itself as superior in speed to the second service delivery to-day. I do not know how to justify this opinion; but it is a very clear impression of mine."

The principal argument in favour of the one service is evidently that it would reduce the length of matches, and consequently reduce fatigue. This would be a far more sensible reduction of fatigue than in present circumstances when most players make a considerable effort to take the net over a very fast first service which rarely comes off.

It is indubitable that a five-set match has to-day become a very arduous test from the physical point of view," concludes Lacoste. "On the other hand the three-set match is rather short. The one-service rule is therefore an excellent solution to the problem. At all events it seems that a trial tournament should be organized."

BRUGNON ALSO.

J. Brugnon also favours the change to one service. The suggestion seems logical to him and he thinks that the officials should experiment with the idea and discover not if it is of benefit to certain players but if it favours the game itself.

Mr. Cochet considers that player above the average height would be favoured by the one-service rule because they would benefit from the greater height for delivery at the command. But those of medium or short stature would suffer because they would have to deliver the first ball very low.

H.K.C.C. MATCH

Members of the Hongkong Cricket Club will be engaged in an inter-club match on the Club ground to-day at 2 p.m., when the Over 30s will be opposed to the Under 30s. The following are the teams:—
Over 30s—H. J. Armstrong, P. Baskett, A. G. A. Bowker, G. Dunkley, H. E. Jupp, E. J. R. M. Haywood, J. E. M. Ricketts, K. Robinson, Lt. J. Stocker, and R. Talbot.

UNFAIR PENALISING OF GOALKEEPER IN HOCKEY MATCH

Accidental Loss Of Stick Should Not Incur A Penalty Bully

BIG MAMAK MATCH POSTPONED

Several Alterations In Interport Trial

(By "Bully-Off")

THERE was an incident in the Macao-Medway Officers game of Sunday last about which I would like to make a few observations. I refer to the award of a penalty-bully against the Macao goal-keeper when he attempted to clear with a kick after his stick had been knocked out of his hand in a melee in front of the goal. There was a doubt existing in the minds of some of the spectators at the time as to whether the decision was correct, and since then several players have approached me on the matter. I would like to point out at once that Lieut. Cmdr. Leigh was quite justified in giving a penalty-bully if one interprets the rules to the letter. The rule in question states: "no player shall take part in, nor interfere with, the game unless he has his own stick in his hand."

NOW the goal-keeper, under the rules is permitted an alternative method of clearing, namely kicking. If one interprets the above rule to the letter the goal-keeper is out of the game until he has retrieved his stick and is deprived of utilising his alternative. It means that if in tackling an opponent his stick is accidentally knocked out of his hand, as was the case on Sunday, he has to stand aside and allow the attacker to score without attempting to save. This seems rather harsh on the goal-keeper, and I do not think that is the interpretation the power-that-be meant to be placed on the rule.

I can understand a penalty-bully being awarded in the event an obstruction being caused by the goal-keeper's stick falling to the ground and more especially if the goal-keeper deliberately throws his stick to the ground. But if he accidentally loses his stick and there is no obstruction I see no possible reason why he should be penalised.

I would suggest that the rule is meant to apply in particular to a player to prevent him from continuing the game with his opponent's stick after a collision in which both players lose their sticks, and to a goal-keeper only when he obstructs by dropping his stick or deliberately throwing his stick to the ground. That at least seems to be the fairest interpretation of the rule.

THE needle Mamak tournament game down for decision tomorrow has been postponed for much deliberation by the Committee. There has been a great deal of talk about the match during the past week following the announcement that the Police sought postponement in view of the fact that Blackburn was playing for the Rest XI against the Colony Interport team. But there was more behind the Police request than has previously been made public. In addition to the absence of Blackburn, Pile will be away from the Colony during the week-end and three other members of the team are on the sick list.

It was stated by the C.B.A. that earlier in the season they asked for the game to be brought forward but their request was refused. There appears, however, to have been some misunderstanding in this connection for the application never reached the hands of Perkins, the Police secretary. The Police offered to field a team against the C.B.A. on Thursday last but in view of a previous fixture the C.B.A. had with the University the game was not played.

It is only fair to the C.B.A. that the match be re-arranged sometime before February 23 for after that date they will be without the services of Pole and B. Blackford, their two backs. Both are now ceasing "Home" I understand arrangements are being made to play the game on February 18.

THERE have been several alterations in the Interport and Rest teams to-morrow. Rodrigues, of the University, is unable to play and P. Singh, the Rest back, has been transferred to fill the vacancy. Pole will be brought in his place at back for the Rest. The injury sustained by Lal Singh, the Interport left flank man, in a recent game prevents him from taking the field and Kalwant Singh, the Radio player, who is the reserve forward will be brought in at left wing.

ANOTHER last minute change is the inclusion of G.E.R. Divett, of the H.K. Club, at inside left for the Interport side in place of Lieut. C. C. Garthwaite. The latter is suffering from injury to the left foot and will probably be out of the game for some weeks.

IN the Rest side, T. Whitley will play at inside right in place of Kalwant Singh and the Punjabis centre forward will lead the attack. Lieut. C. P. G. de Winton will play at left wing.

C. L. Gregory, the former H.K. Club Seniors and Slim Shield goal-keeper is returning to the game after a long absence. He played yesterday between the sticks for the C.B.A. and will probably be included in the Club side in the forthcoming triangular tournament.

Army Beat Brigade in Trial Match

CLUB "A" WIN

The Army defeated the Hongkong Singapore Brigade, R.A., by three goals to two in a trial hockey match on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon. The game was in preparation for the forthcoming Triangular Tournament between the Navy, Army and Club.

The Army were without the services of Lt. Garthwaite and Lal Singh, on the left flank, both of whom are on the injured list, and Lt. Ravenhill, at right half-back. Their places were filled by Sepoy Kirtar Singh (Punjabis) at inside left, Lt. de Winton (S.W.B.) at left wing, and Lance-Corporal Yeomans (Lincolns) at right-half back.

The game was fairly evenly contested, the Army leading by two goals to one at the interval. W.O. Senior and Kirtar Singh netted for the Army, while the Brigade's goal was scored by Khuda Bux, on the left wing. In the second half, the Army goal was menaced but Lt. Metcalfe, at right back, made some fine clearances. Good forward movement resulted in Kirtar Singh netting the winning goal for the Army.

CLUB "A" BEAT RECREIO

The Hongkong Hockey Club "A" eleven defeated the Club de Recreio by the odd goal in three in a friendly hockey match at King's Park. In the first half, F. B. W. Smith gave the Club the lead, G. E. R. Divett adding a second point shortly after the interval. Xavier reduced the deficit for the Recreio, for whom W. Reed played a fine game at centre-half.

BOTH TEAMS WEAKENED.

Both the Medway and Radio were without three of their leading players when the teams met at the R.N.O.S.C. ground yesterday. The Radio started with nine men, were lent one by the Medway, and later the team was completed.

The Radio won by the odd goal in three. Gurbachan Singh netting shortly after the start to put the Medway in arrears, and he followed this up shortly after with another. Browning reduced the lead, and the second half was blank.

UNITED SERVICES XI TO MEET MACAO.

TWO NOMINEES UNLIKELY STARTERS.

The United Services XI to oppose Macao on Thursday next at King's Park will be as follows: Pte. Hollingsworth (Lincolns); Lieut. N. W. Metcalfe (R.A.); Lieut. Comdr. E. R. C. MacVicker (H.M.S. Otus); Lieut. Comdr. Hill (H.M.S. Medway); C. Halford (S.W.B.); Lieut. F. V. R. Larken (H.M.S. Berwick); Lieut. W. B. Donald (H.M.S. Medway); Lieut. J. H. Eaden (H.M.S. Medway); Sub-Lieut. Alexander Sinclair (H.M.S. Berwick); Lieut. C. C. Garthwaite (R.A.); Lal Singh (Punjabis).

Reserve: Sub-Lieut. Cheyne (H.M.S. Medway). It is probable that two at least of the selected XI will be unable to play. I am informed that Lieut. Garthwaite is suffering from an injury to the left foot sustained while playing football a short while ago, and Lal Singh will not have recovered sufficiently to take his place out on the wing.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

"It's a Boy", coming on Sunday to the King's Theatre, is a picture very full indeed of fun. It is a rib-tickler, amusing situation following amusing situation in rapid-fire fashion. Leslie Henson has long been established as a comedian who thoroughly knows the art of extracting laughter. In this delightful picture he has an admirable foil in Edward Everett Horton, whose portraiture of a bridegroom haunted by a spectre of the past is admirably painted. Albert Burdon, Alfred Drayton and Wendy Barrie are also notable in a picture giving really good entertainment.

"Meet the Baron"

"Meet the Baron," hilarious mixture of comedy, lulling musical numbers, and spectacular colour, serves to bring to the screen Jack Pearl, famous "Baron Munchausen" of radio, who, with Jimmy Durante, goes through a series of hectic adventures in a girl's college in the new metro-Goldwyn-Mayer laugh-classic that is scheduled as the next change at the Queen's Theatre. The new picture boasts the most remarkable all-comedian cast ever assembled. Pearl, internationally famous, Jimmy Durante, "What! No Beer?" and other hits of the screen, Zasu Pitts, famous comedienne, Ted Healy and his hilarious "stooges," Edna May Oliver of "Ladies of the Jury" fame, Ben Bard, Henry Kolker and William B. Davidson have featured roles in the comedy which was directed by Walter Lang who filmed the successful "Warrior's Husband." In addition there is a vivid ballet of "collegiate cuties" playing college girls and staging the sensational "Dance of the Show Bath" in the production.

"Ace of Aces"

Aerial thrills said to surpass anything ever shown on the motion picture screen are incorporated in the romance of John Saunders' gripping story, "Ace of Aces," an RKO-Radio Picture showing to-day at the King's Theatre with Richard Dix in the starring title role, supported by Elizabeth Allan and Ralph Bellamy. Daring motion picture stunts perform countless breath-taking feats in "Ace of Aces." Squadrons of trim fighting planes zoom, twist and dart about in the sky. Burning planes crash in sensational flights. Bullet-ridden ships disintegrate in mid-air and fall as debris to the ground. "Ace of Aces" also blends a highly dramatic study by Richard Dix. A pacifist firmly condemning war, his assertions are considered cowardly by his fiancée whose derision eventually sends him to battle. When the mental strain overcomes him, he makes his last ride, redeeming himself in a spine-tingling climax.

"This Day and Age"

"This Day and Age," the first great spectacle of modern times by the master of spectacle, Cecil B. DeMille, will be shown Tuesday at the Alhambra Theatre. In the large cast are Charles Bickford, Richard Cromwell, Eddie Nugent, Ben Alexander, Harry Green, Fuzzy Knight, Bradley Page and George Barbier. Miss Judith Allen is a new discovery. By DeMille, DeMille has also brought to the films in "This Day and Age" the sons of screen stars of to-day and yesterday, including Wallace Reid, Jr.; Eric von Stroheim, Jr.; Carlyle Blackwell, Jr.; Bryant Washburn, Jr.; Neil Hart, Jr.; Frank Tinney, Jr.; and Fred Kohler, Jr. The story concerns the battle of the youth of an average community against a city's subversive influences after all efforts of the adult community have failed. When Boys' Week comes, the city comes along, students of the high schools are appointed to the town's executive, administrative and judicial positions. One of the boys, appointed to the position of District Attorney, has seen the murder of a merchant by one of the town's racketeers. Zenitously, he comes to the witness stand at the trial, only to have the defence attorney take advantage of legal technicalities and win an acquittal for his client. Undaunted, the boys go after more evidence and in securing that evidence, one of their number is killed by the racketeer, and the murder is planted on one of the boys. The story reaches its height when a mob of five thousand indignant youngsters kidnap the racketeer, drag him off to an old abandoned quarry where they hold a kangaroo court, and "sweet" a confession out of their captive, using his own expert "sweetening" methods.

The Foreign Ministers of Greece, Turkey, Yugoslavia and Rumania have signed the Balkan Pact, guaranteeing the integrity of their respective frontiers for five years.

It has been stated that the signatories will not relax their efforts to induce Bulgaria to sign the Pact, as it is considered that her inclusion would absolutely ensure peace in the usually turbulent Balkans.—United Press.

ALEXIS AND WIFE ARRIVE IN PEKING

goggle-eyed audience to spasms of laughter in an hilarious production of what passes for college life among the gay and carefree. It is aptly titled "College Humor," and opens to-day at the Queen's Theatre. A glamorous cast includes Bing Crosby, Richard Arlen, Mary Carlisle, Jack Oakie, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Coach Howard Jones of the University of Southern California, Lona Andre, Mary Kornman and a perfectly dazzling collection of much-beloved maidens named the "Ox-Road Co-Eds." The picture was directed by Wesley Ruggles.

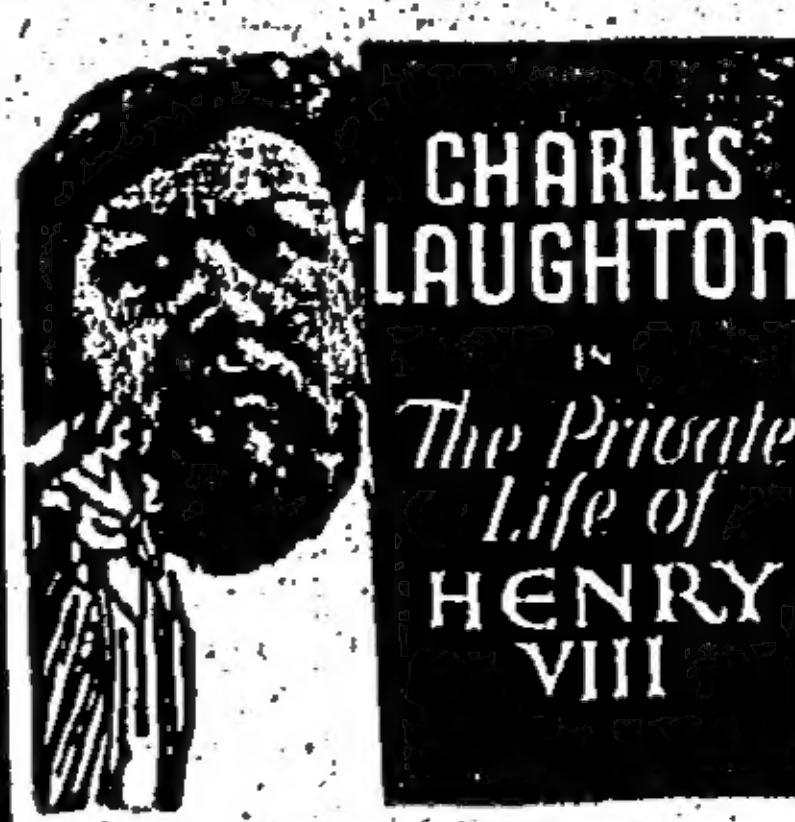

"Take a Chance"

"I'm really not that bad at all." That's the emphatic declaration of auburn-haired and very English Lillian Bond, who once more takes the role of a vituperative siren in Paramount's musical extravaganza, "Take a Chance," which opened yesterday at the Alhambra Theatre. James Dunn, Charles (Buddy) Rogers and June Knight head the large featured cast. Dressed in a pair of black satin pyjamas which set off her hair and hazel eyes to perfection, she was sitting cross-legged on a studio table. "In most of my previous pictures, I've been cast as the lady with the come-hither eyes, the girl who delighted in squelching the film's ingenuite. But that's not my nature at all, and frankly I'm a wee bit piqued at interpreting that type of role so consistently in the cinema. In 'Take a Chance,' I lead the chorus in several numbers and get a chance to show what I can do as a dramatic actress."

"Don Quixote"

"Don Quixote", which opens at the Central Theatre to-day, is the picture made last autumn in the South of France with Chaplin in the title role and George Robey as Sancho Panza. Strictly speaking this is not Chaplin's debut—he made a film, "Ivan the Terrible" more than twenty years ago—but he is, perhaps, the most important "capture" the film have made since the talkies arrived. Feodor Ivanovich Chaplin, a shoemaker's apprentice, railway porter and stavedore before he made his cinematic debut in 1892; since then he has progressed to international renown and has toured all the principal cities of the world as an operatic star. Much thought was given to the selection of a screen role of international significance which would provide scope for the Russian singer's talents, and it was his known success in Massenet's opera that finally determined the choice of "Don Quixote." The film is not, in fact based on that opera but is taken from Cervantes' classic story by Paul Morand the French writer. Special music has been written for Chaplin's three songs.

CONTRACT RING

By W. E. McKenney

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

The squeeze play for which every expert is on the lookout is the Vienna coup squeeze. While this play is not so rare in contract as in auction, nevertheless many players confuse an ordinary squeeze with the Vienna coup. To-day's hand was made by O. S. Emrich of Cleveland who, with his partner, Elmer J. Rubin, took the lead at the end of the first session of the open contract pair event at the recent national championship tournament in Cincinnati.

Several players mistook the play in this hand for a Vienna coup, but it is not a Vienna coup, since the ace of clubs does not have to be played to execute the squeeze. Emrich sat in the South.

HYDROCARBON OILS PRODUCTION.

PROTECTION FOR BRITISH INDUSTRY

London, Feb. 9.

The House of Commons approved the second reading last night of the British Hydrocarbon Oils Production Bill.

The measure rises from the announcement made recently that the Government would give preference of not less than 4d per gallon on oil derived from indigenous coal, shale, and derivatives thereof. Immediately following that announcement, Imperial Chemical Industries proceeded to erect plant designed to produce 130,000,000 gallons of motor spirit by hydro-generation of coal.

Mr. Ernest Brown, Minister for Mines, stated that provisional figures just available indicated a fairly substantial increase in coal and gas output. There was also a large increase in the quantity of spirit obtained from shale oil and the same was true of oil produced by the low temperature carbonisation process. Two further low temperature carbonisation plants are to be erected.

Regarding the erection of the Imperial Chemical Industries plant at Gillingham, it was said that at the end of January a large number of men were directly or indirectly employed in connexion with it, and that orders for machinery and equipment to the value of £1,100,000 had been placed.—British Wire- less.

UNITED IRELAND

STIRRING OVATION FOR O'DUFFY

Dublin, Feb. 9.

Fifteen thousand blue-shirted men and blue-bloused women gave General O'Duffy a rousing ovation to-day when he delivered the presidential address at the first convention of the United Ireland Party at Mansion House, Dublin. The policy of the party was fully outlined in a statement by the Executive. Principal planks in the party's platform are:

Voluntary union of all Ireland as a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations, in free and equal partnership with Great Britain and the Dominions, for the mutual benefit of all concerned.

Settlement of the financial dispute between Great Britain and the Irish Free State.

General O'Duffy, attacking the De Valera Government said it had not the courage to go out of the Commonwealth decently or stay in it decently, and that the country was suffering as a result.—Reuter Special.

DAWN OF NEW ERA.

MR. ICKES SEES HAPPY DAYS AHEAD OF U.S.

Washington, Feb. 9.

"A bloodless revolution has occurred," declared Mr. Ickes, Secretary for the Interior in a speech here to-day.

In describing President Roosevelt's accession to power, Mr. Ickes said the good old days of laissez faire had gone forever.

The United States, he asserted, was at the dawn of a new era. He predicted that all social abuses and injustices would soon be wiped out, sweatshops eliminated and slums cleared.

Unemployment insurance and old age pensions would soon be introduced, said Mr. Ickes, giving a feeling of security to the workless and the aged.—Reuter.

GOLD SHIPMENTS

RE-INSURANCE RATES
CHECK FLOW

London, Feb. 10.
Foreign Exchange dealers point out that the exceptionally high reinsurance rate on gold of 45 shillings, which is being paid on shipments by the French steamer Paris, has appreciably raised the franc price of gold, thus tending to check the flow of the precious metal to America.
The raising of the French bankrate to 3 per cent is expected to have a similar effect.
The situation seems opportune
for the United States Exchange Equalisation Fund to purchase gold currencies, thus relieving the pressure on the Gold Bloc resulting from under-valuation of the dollar.
The purchasing of gold currencies by the United States would aid the Gold Bloc to carry out its plans for deflation, experts declare.

KIDNAPPERS' VICTIM.

RICH AMERICAN BANKER
FINALLY RELEASED

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 9.
After three weeks in the hands of kidnapers, Edward Bremer, prominent banker and real estate operator of St. Paul and Minneapolis, was released by his captors to-day.
He was set at liberty near Rochester, N. J., seventy miles from this city. He was uninjured but in a weak and exhausted condition.
His eyes were sealed with adhesive tape during the whole of the time he was held captive.
Ransom was paid by the Bremer family, and although the amount was not made public it is believed to have been U. S. $200,000, as his relatives had expressed their willingness to pay this sum. —Reuter.

be commenced.
When he was at Hangchow,

TARIFF DEFENCE

BRITAIN RETALIATES
AGAINST FRANCE

London, Feb. 9.
Unless France removes the dis-crimatory quotas on British imports, Britain will impose retaliatory duties on French goods as from Monday, February 12.
A Note to this effect has been despatched to the French Government. —Reuter.
It will be recalled that the trouble over the French quotas started about two months ago when France, allegedly to correct her adverse balance of trade with England, imposed a surtax on British imports.
As a result, of immediate and strong protests from Britain the surtax was removed, but in place of it quotas were reduced on over 100 lines of British exports.
Ten days was given France to restore the 100 per cent. quotas, but in view of the upheaval in France, the time has been extended.
Imports from America are also subject to quota restrictions. In France, but Great Britain alleges that the United States has been given more equitable treatment.

Observatory returns for January show that the average mean temperature during the month was 55.0, the highest being 69.1 and the lowest 42.8. There were 144.8 hours of sunshine and 0.47-inch of rain, while the average humidity was 70.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to recognize, provisionally and pending instructions from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Rodrigo Gullher-Alves Guerra as in charge of the Consulate General for
